With the construction of the new school four years ago, Kayhi rocketed into the sky. We have seized opportunities and discovered our own planets in sports, academics, and clubs and we have re-energized our school spirit. To start off our trek, our girls' track team zapped Juneau and took the 1996 title at Southeast, the drill team beamed to the Macy's Day Parade in New York, the girl's fast pitch team orbited into Southeast, and the basketball team journeyed to state.

We have made a meteoric impact in our academic pursuits, including three National Merit Finalists, many Debate state finalists, and several students who have competed on a national level. Our extracurricular activities have moved light years ahead with the addition of many new activities and the expansion of numerous old favorites. Rotary Interact 2000 has doubled in size, ACDC has increased its membership, and new clubs such as the Spanish Club and Chess Club have developed.

Kayhi has become more involved in foreign exchange, and there have been many organized student treks to Spain, New York City, Mexico, Disneyland, Baja, and D.C. Not only have we journeyed to where no person has gone before, but we have brought a bit of culture to our terra firma, including the Russian Ballet and large town dramatic productions. In addition to academic and social growth, we have also increased our school spirit. Pep club has plastered the walls with posters and enticed an ever growing number of students into active participation.

With the advent of the 1996-97 school year, Kayhi is blasting full speed into new horizons. And though we haven't always been the biggest star in the Milky Way, we are constantly striving to be the brightest.

Catching major air, junior Nick Burns takes a flying leap off of a mogul on top of Deer Mountain. It is a common past time for most avid snow boarders to hike Deer mountain and launch themselves off of small hills.

Colorful blocks and interesting shapes greet senior Erik Sarvela, juniors Vivian Sweet, and Amy Rockwood, and sophomore Melissa Cowan when exploring the amazing Mall of America in Minnesota, on a trip for Junior Achievement.

Rock climbing freshmen Jarred Lawrence, Sam Fox, Wendy Mutar, Nicole Ripley, and Nissa Cleman flex their muscles and work their way up the rocky side of Kayhi's cliff-like outer walls. Hoping to one day make it on American Gladiators, they take a quick break before continuing their quest. They hold on tightly to those gigantic, enormous, humongous, tremendous boulders while shoving their small feet into available foot holes. Nicole holds out her fist in a display of true power while Wendy clutches on to a rock behind her. Nissa stretches out, ready to continue her climb while Sam, foot out, looks all set to hop down. Jarred, separated from the group, makes a stand. This activity is just one of many at Kayhi which allows students the freedom to cavort as they please. Let's hope these freshmen stick with their hiking expedition since we know they can do it.

Hanging out in the back of senior Jasen Bennie's truck in the Kayhi student parking lot, sophomores Katie Poet, Melanie Crevier, Leili Plasencia, and Liandra Danner share a quick group hug while sophomore Amanda Judson presents the group to the world. Dressed in only a t-shirt, Liandra snuggles up to her pals to get warm on this dreary, rainy day. Leili closes her eyes, dreaming of the days that were sunny and warm while Melanie does a broad smile, proving she's a good sport when it comes to weather like this. Katie looks off into the distance, trying to decide what she wants to do after school today. The girls sneak into Jasen's truck while he was gone in an effort to prove how very brave they are. They knew they would have time to goof off in the back for a while before Jasen came back to shoo them away.

Busy painting signs to show their nifty school spirit, juniors Tabri Schulz and Tara Dillenburg give us a little smile. Armed with brushes, the two are ready to paint anything they come in contact with, so watch out! Tabri holds her brush up to reveal the pretty color to anyone who's interested. Large pieces of colored paper camouflage the commons floor while the members of pep club use their multicolored brushes to work some magic. Pep club meets on Wednesdays during flex to work on signs which show our school's great spirit. These signs are then plastered all over the walls, decorating the commons with an assortment of colors in blue, yellow, green, black, brown, and maroon. Over the past two years, Kayhi's spirit has increased due to the efforts of the fabulous pep club members. Let's go Kay-hi!

Enjoying one of the few days of sunshine last summer, seniors Claire Reynolds and Becky Peterman lounge around Whale Park. These lazy days of summer are enough to make anyone smile, especially with school creeping up. Holding bottles of 7-up in their hands, the girls get ready to drink away the thirst that comes with the hot, hot sun. The flowers and bushes nearby are trying hard to soak up the bright yellow rays which will help contribute to their daily diet. There are always a group of tourists nearby in Whale Park, admiring the lovely flowers and taking pictures of themselves by the beautiful totem pole which decorates the park. Wearing her grey knit hat, Claire protects her head from the hot weather and squints her eyes (as any true Ketchikanian would) to block out the bright light. Days like these are some of the best in the year.
No homework for three months! When school lets out in May, this is the shout most commonly heard from Ketchikan teens. Freedom! Left with all kinds of time and no school work, Kayhi students are free to pursue many other activities. For many, this means a summer of fun in the sun (or rain), but for many more, summer freedom means time for work.

From bagging groceries to fishing for halibut, Ketchikan teens have a wide variety of job opportunities to choose from to help provide that needed extra cash for all the necessities of teenage life.

As Ketchikan is invaded by cruise ships, many teens find work in the tourism industry. Chris Arteaga, a senior, said, "I ended up working at Westmark on the tram all summer. I had the chance to interact with tourists and meet lots of interesting people."

"I enjoyed my summer because I spent it dressed up as a lumberjack and taught tourists about the fish." - Kirsten Mix

Kirsten Mix, a sophomore, also worked with tourists at Beaver Falls Hatchery. "I enjoyed my summer being dressed up as a Lumberjack. I taught tourists about fish all summer long."

But summer time is not all about work, some were able to travel and experience new places. For a few, this meant more of an adventure than they bargained for. Freshman Erin Guthrie remembered a summer trauma with a grin on her face. "When I was in Wyoming, I crashed the family rental car into a big truck. It's all my best friend's fault since she was the one who told me to speed up and turn sharp."

Traveling, working, or just hanging out, Kayhi students look forward to summer as a time to be with friends, enjoy the freedom lazy summer days provide, and forget about homework for a while.

What did Senior Alyx Lesko do this summer? "I went to Summer Exploration Camp in Wellesley, Mass. There were people from all over the world, and the majority of them didn't speak English! While at camp this summer, I got the privilege of seeing the Charles River fireworks display, one of the biggest and best in the world!" Alyx added with excitement.

"My favorite part of the Fourth of July is the food, booths, and definitely the cotton candy, BABY!" says junior Colette Thompson. She enjoyed her Fourth of July, even though she said the fireworks were "same ol', same ol'." A suggestion she has is "they should play music on the radio that go with the fireworks. They do it in Boise, Idaho, and it's awesome!"

Who wanted to see big guys climb up huge trees and smash watermelons? Mike Benner did! On his Fourth of July he watched the logging show. "I went to my grandmother's house for dinner, too. It's a Fourth of July family tradition. The logging show, which takes place at the Norman Walker baseball field, is also a favorite yearly tradition among many Ketchikaners.

"There were lots of bright lights!" exclaimed Jamie Uuellyn, a freshman. Bright lights? Ketchikan? No! Jamie went to Las Vegas, the City of Lights, for the Fourth of July. As a consolation to all of you jealous non-travelers, the Las Vegas fireworks weren't much better than the ones in K-town. There was a positive side to her trip. "It was very hot!" unlike Ketchikan.

Once more the annoying sound of the alarm strike 6:00 a.m. and the same old routine starts again. Brush your teeth, comb your hair, grab your lunch and go. It that simple? No, but we’re back and we are ready to show our new styles.

Each year students show their new fashion statements. Whether it is the classy, baggy, sometimes “Clueless” or just plain jeans and T-shirts look, everyone seems to have their own style. What a person wears shows their individuality and who they really are; that’s why new styles appear each year.

Junior Kris Nall remarks, “The baggy look has mellowed down, and earrings are in for the guys, well... maybe...”

“Chapstick seems to have become a necessity, it is often found sitting in one’s pocket and dangling off one’s backpack.

“My chapstick is my pride and joy; it goes with me everywhere because I am constantly using it.” - Nicole Carlin

Left: “Saturday Night Fever” is back and better than ever. Stayin’ alive, stayin’ alive, senior Caspian Brand is a dancing machine!

Below: Bright and snazzy colors seem to be popping up on peoples’ fingernails this fall, for gals as well as... guys?! This really is the 90’s.

"My chapstick is my pride and joy; it goes with me everywhere because I am constantly using it.’’ - Nicole Carlin Prime - accessories bring out a little bit of personality in each of us. They can range from fingernail polish to decorated backpacks. Pride and joy; it goes with me everywhere because I’m constantly using it,” cheerful freshman Nicole Carlin boasts.

Artwork is not just seen on pictures anymore; it is found on student's bodies. There has been an increase in bravery with students who get tattoos, and the pain is worth it. Juniors Jeremy Schultz and Wendell Pahang remember when they got their tattoos, “The pain and time were nothing compared to handing over the dough!”

Being back at school is not all about work. It is about having a lot of fun and showing one's attitude through the way they dress. Whether it is fashion or accessories, it all adds up to one style... the Kayhi style!

"Senior Carnival is a much anticipated event for all children growing up in Ketchikan. At least it was for me. However, now that I’m a senior, I realize that the benefit of all the fun and craziness is to pay for all future senior activities, such as the senior prom. I enjoy seeing the little children's smiling faces."
- Brian Elliott

"The senior carnival is not quite as cool as when we were little. When I was four, the fish pond was the coolest thing in the world. The seniors don’t seem as big now and the guys aren’t as good looking. I’m doing the cake walk. We decorated it with stars and moons and planets."
- Mandy Davis

- Japhy Jenkins

"The senior class has worked very hard for the carnival to happen. We use it to provide for all the things we do throughout the year and it gives us something to do on a boring night in Ketchikan. All I can say is that the carnival for the class of ’97 will be and has been the best carnival ever."
- Kalee Lervick

"The senior carnival gives us an opportunity for a better prom, and it’s really nice to have the community contribute to a better class year. It is also great having the parents help with ticket sales. It’s really weird when I think about the carnival because our class will be putting it on. It is exciting!"

Seniors

Full-Moon
To start the masquerade of seniors during last summer's Fourth of July parade was a colorful poster which was stuck to the grill of a large semi-truck. This sign, and many others, took the Senior class three hours of well invested time to create. The seniors celebrated in style, handprints and all. Despite warning after warning by police mounted on bicycles, they persisted in showing their class spirit. Some dressed as patriots and others worked as ruthless thugs (Freshmen chasers). The seniors successfully imprisoned numerous freshmen who were then tied, painted, and led around by doggy leashes. The senior motto rang loud and clear as all seniors chanted: "Party hardy, rock n' roll, love is great, we're in heaven, cause we're the class of 97!!" Or a version close to it.

The first pep assembly of the year started with a boom when the class of '97 seniors stormed in to the theme song of Mission Impossible. Jennifer Dossman and Nicole Deal lead the procession onward carrying a state-of-the-art poster, proclaiming "Senior Power." A large multitude of seniors, including Remalene Domingo, Jamie King, Mandy Davis, Teya Plamondon, Travis Mackie, Larissa Hebel, Casey Stokes, Mike Huey, and Jason Nelson followed close behind shouting "'97 rules!" While other classmates cheered the seniors on, the motley crew of seniors paraded around the gym twice before residing in the designated area. Once there, all 160 remained standing and took a stand against their underclassmen rivals. There is no debate about it, this year's seniors are truly the best of the best.

Between handing out candy and squirting water guns filled with specially mixed liquid concoctions, seniors Jenny Brown, Grady Weisz, Mark Adams, Beth Poet, Crystal Skidmore, Kim Smith, Eric Sivertsen, and Marie Updike posed with style, while seniors Teya Plamondon, Amy Dossett, Carey Guthrie, Willie Fisher and Angela Beedle dangled their feet from the all-mighty Senior float. As prepared as they are to stay on this awesome float the whole parade through, only seven seniors remained forty-five minutes into the ride. All of the rest chose to walk in front of the float after being plummeted with numerous eggs and water balloons from graduated students and upstanding people of the community. Because of this class' spirit, the whole parade got a boost of excitement. Way to go Seniors!

In a semi-circle surrounding the Senior Square Marsha Forty, Mariah Midgett, Anney Carson, Jennifer Wolf, Michelle McGinnness, April Thomas, and Amy Urban show their senior spirit. Their finger nails glitter of black, the senior's strong, no-nonsense color. Freshmen and other underclassmen learn to fear this golden square soon after beginning their high school career at Kayhi. This year's seniors have made the freshmen kiss, clean, and meet head-to-floor with the revered square. Because of the school board's fairly new rule that seniors can no longer "haze" the freshmen, the Senior Square is their last strong standing point. And they mean to show it, baby! So where ever you are, and what ever you are doing, make sure that you watch your step. If you don't, one of the watchful seniors just might choose to help you out.

Carrying on the tradition, Lisha Beraldi, Robert Morlarty, Jeremy Kromay, and Dayna Hert add their piece of self-recognition to the hill. In the long tradition of the hill being used as a canvas for over zealous juniors and seniors, the expected array of flashing lights, sirens and disgruntled police officers as well as a band of rowdy seniors bearing farm bi-products (eggs) dispersed the hard-at-work and untiring juniors. Not yielding to the meager attempts by the establishment, they once again returned to their duties as vandals within twenty minutes, and after many failed attempts, the police were finally able to chase them away. Or maybe they just ran out of paint!

“La cucaracha, la cucaracha!” “Alouette, gentille alouette!” Spanish or French, these snazzy seniors are proving that they know all the right moves as they kick up their beautiful, blue-jeaned legs. Joining arms to keep their balance on the shiny, newly waxed floor, Elizabeth Rado, April Huie, Sabrina Pereira, and Katee Lervick strut their stuff in the halls of Kayhi on a break from Mr. Crockett’s U.S. government class. This was a necessary release from the stress and strain of the national voting poll conducted by CNN. Kayhi was one of three hundred schools that participated in this first time educational event. Elizabeth, April, Sabrina, and Katee cast their ballots and headed for the halls.

Class spirit and the readiness to do anything to make the grade has proven that the juniors are an elite bunch. With challenging classes and balancing their social and school life, the juniors seem to be doing quite well. When Bill Boulton was asked what he thinks of his junior year, he said, "It is a good experience (so far)." Some juniors were just happy to not have to worry about being tormented by the upperclassmen. "I feel like I have some power!" Matt Caskey says as he remembers his freshman year when the upper class men intimidated him. Even though all odds seem to be against the juniors, they have proven to themselves time and time again that they can accomplish all their dreams big and small no matter what they are.
The gym is packed with three of the four classes of Kayhi. Freshmen, sophomores, juniors...but where are the seniors? As everyone patiently waits, the theme from Mission Impossible begins to blare over the P.A. Decked in black and carrying posters saying ‘Senior Power’, the seniors proudly march in. Almost every year the seniors have ruled the pep assemblies with their spirit, winning the Spirit Stick. This year is different; Pep Club Vice President, Alec Dickinson, declares the juniors the winners of this year’s 1st spirit contest! Amy Rockwood exclaims, “It was awesome! Juniors rule!” Dusty Vokacek smiles and says, “Two thumbs up. It was a lot better than last year’s assemblies; almost everyone was into it.” Landon Morgan seems to sum it all up by saying, “We should have more of them.”
It's amazing what people find entertaining when they're bored out of their minds! Juniors Wendell Pahang, Sara Caskey, Ryan Criswell, and Jeremy Schultz are having fun watching the canoe float by while trying to think of something else to do.

"I want to major in pre-med, go to medical school and become an osteopath," junior Joe Trettevik informed his friends. Joe is looking far ahead, but some juniors don't even know what to do after 2:45!

The last bell rings and the halls are flooded; everyone has something they just have to do. For Sarah Ohmer there is more than one thing that's necessary. "I get to go to cheerleading practice for two hours, then my teachers load on homework every night."

There are those students who actually do their homework, but some kids don't even seem to care. When asked what she did after school, Lyndsey Stokes replied, "Not homework." No matter what kids do after school, whether it's 2:45 or May of 1998, they'll always have a special place here in Kayhi.
Far below: Cuddling together in the style of friendship, juniors Jessica Boyer and Jo Dean Bifoss lean on each other. Everybody knows two heads are better than one.

Below: Smiling happily as they hang together in the commons, junior Tabri Schulz and Debi Day use their twenty-minute break to relax and gossip.

Below: Glancing over to something hopefully more interesting than her own work, Sarah Nelson peers at Erin Wallin's handiwork. Their junior classroom motivation that day was barely there as they were weighted down with piles of work.

Not just a class...

Walking into a classroom, there is a boy and girl sitting knee to knee reading silly letters to each other while the rest of the class laughs and listens. This can't be a class; these kids are having too much fun. It is a class, though, and this project is one of the many crazy assignments coming from the class of '98.

"It's a fun course. We get to do a lot of neat things, but Mr. Bolling is still a dork," said junior Laura Rosendin of the class. Even though Mr. Bolling, the teacher of the class, works his students hard, most of the pupils enjoy and even look forward to his class, as does he. "The English III College Prep classes are to my day what marshmallow pieces are to Lucky Charms; they sweeten my day!" he says with a smile.
Curly Sue move over! Cause sophomores Amanda Stidd and Nicole Pavlik are taking the floor, the movies, and the whole chaotic shebang. These two lovely curly cue kids are Goldie Locks' dream, since even she could not master those glorious, perfect spirals. Dreaming of modeling for some totally awesome hair agencies, these girls know that they will some day be the envy of every tall blonde beauty at Clairol. With the new ninety's fashion, every kind of hair style is in, and these luscious ringlets definitely take the cake. With their soft bounce, even Maybelline can't say that it's not natural. The determination of the Peanuts' girl with the natural curly hair shines in their bright faces, and the girls smile happily, knowing their cool, hip style will always be right on the money.

Touche! Anybody want to fight? Sophomore swashbucklers Angela Jones and Vanessa Fluery battle it out while the spellbound audience, Colleen Cowan, April Dela Cruz, and Jared Plumb, watch from the sidelines. This excited group took a break from reading one of the many action filled stories assigned in English class when they decided to start acting it out. It is a well known fact that reading plays aloud and acting them out cements the meaning in the readers' minds. Angela, portraying the courageous hero, dons a mesh skirt, while Vanessa, her opponent, is hidden under the notorious black cape reserved especially for the evil, conniving characters in plays. The hero works to defeat the villain and, of course, as in all plays of good and evil, the protagonist will conquer. For there is no one who wishes to see their idol terminated by the criminal.

A joyful little cluster of heads decorates the Commons floor as those silly, smiling sophomores Cara Wallace, Tina Weiss, Ariana Dickinson, Kristin Coffin, Julie Painter and Annie Fisher think happy thoughts. Lying with their heads toward the sky, they dream of traveling to exciting and amazing lands far, far away. The soft, gentle, lustrous light coming from the windows shines upon their faces as they imagine the fun they would have cheerfully frolicking in a strawberry field on this beautiful day. Sometimes just lying down, forgetting the many trials of life, and thinking about floating on to Neverneverland can be a great form of relaxation. Obviously this gaggle of gal pals has the right idea when it comes to stretching out and enjoying the day. Let us all follow their example and take the time to smell the beautiful red roses.

Pardon, but what was that again? It's utterly amazing the kind of gossip you can hear in the commons at lunch. Sophomores Brooke Nanez and Erin Barnes discuss the ups and downs of life as they chow down on their sandwiches, chips, fruit, candy bars, and cookies. Lunchtime conversations often involve such intensely deep topics as world peace, political views, religion, and daily struggles to more basic ones like homework, boyfriends/girlfriends, recent movies, and the plots of the new television shows. Brooke is quickly filling Erin in on her plans for the weekend as Erin listens intently, contemplating exactly what she will do for her. With good friends to talk to, lunchtime never seems long enough. And with so many topics to discuss, it can really never get boring.
Above: So these are the people running this class? President Brittany Hewitt, loves being punched by her pal, Vice President Ariel Manabat, and strangled by Secretary Lindsey Arntzen. They get along, really they do!

Energizer Bunnies

When it comes to leadership, the sophomore class really has it together. One will not always find a class that can get so many involved. Pres. Brittany Hewitt, Vice Pres. Ariel Manabat, and Sec. Lindsey Arntzen are involved in it for many different reasons.

"It is a good way to get women!" Grins Ariel Manabat as he thinks of his precious duties.

Fund-raisers have been a priority in this class, and they have already done one to start raising money for their senior year...(A fund-raiser that was successful?! Not only were a lot of people involved, it even happened to be a grungy ol' carwash!) With more fund-raisers in store, the sophomore class is like an energizer bunny...they keep going and going and going!
Look out! The sophomores are on the road attempting their skills at driving. They've finally hit the age where it is time to get a license permit and practice, practice, practice!

Not everyone starts out driving perfect. In fact, there are many incidents where one will get into a certain situation, and well, just can't help but freaking out!

Sophomore Trista Bloom remembers her most embarrassing moment, "I was driving with my mom and I noticed all of these cars honking at me and I realized that I was going the wrong way!"

Some good advice to the sophomores: warn people to stay off the streets and sidewalks when you are out cruising with the parents!
Above: Uh oh, you’re in trouble! Claire Brouhard grimaces as she kisses the all mighty senior square. She should have known that it is bad to step on it, but you know, sometimes it is just an accident. Ya right!

Pucker Up!

They are sophomores, right? So why are they still having to kiss the square? It used to be only freshmen that made the mistake of stepping on the sacred square, but not anymore. It seems as though the sophomore class has not quite understood the consequences of standing on or even touching the square.

Claire Brouhard was one of the few unlucky sophomores, “It wasn’t really that bad, but knowing that people stepped on it really grossed me out.”

So watch out sophomores, and don’t be brave, or else you might have to pucker up to the dirty floor of the commons with your lips! Yuck!!

Above: Sophomore hall can be quite a mess when students are running to and from their lockers. The only way to beat the traffic is by pushing and shoving, but let's not get too violent here, sophomores!

Say What?!

While walking down sophomore hall, many different sentence fragments are heard from each classroom. If you put them all together, what would you hear?

“My picture, he left, I know it, what, so bud, he's like my neighbor, you are such a hypocrite, what time is it, do you guys practice, what is the matter with you, what happened to my bag, you are gross, I didn’t get a locker poster, and I know you couldn’t get it, I’ll bring your sleeping bag, it’s very true.”

Obviously, the sophomores hear things like this everyday. No wonder why those silly sophomores talk so much mumbo-jumbo!

CRESCEINT MOONS

Ten little monkeys swinging from a tree, teasing Mr. Crocodile, can't catch me, can't catch me! Those wacky freshmen Donald Alderman, Domnie Soderstrom, and Trevor Bedford, sway from the tables, trying to copy their wonderful primate ancestors, the chimpanzees. With great agility, they let their bodies dangle from the edge. Donald allows his glasses to slip off his face while Trevor acquires his hair's need to flap in the wind. This ability to hang from objects, such as trees, is illustrated by such dexterous animals as bats, possums, monkeys, and little siblings. These hopeful fellows are planning to work themselves into the very exclusive club of danglers. With the fabulous talent they have for conquering gravity and really bad hair rushes, these jolly comrades will have absolutely no trouble making the necessary grade.

When class begins to get dull and attention spans start to wander, freshmen Kristen Chambers, Raymond Ettin, Jonathan Erickson, and Kim Cropp know how to relieve the boredom. Taking time out from their very busy schedules, these four decided to have a little fun of their own. To achieve this difficult geometrical stance, these students had to put their ingenuity to the ultimate test. Kim stretched out in a relaxing carefree pose while those behind her struggled to remain in their precarious positions. Hoping that none of the authority figures would decide to take a stroll down History Hall, these characters let their creativity run wild; at least while the halls are empty and classes are in session. And always remember, in this school, attitude is everything! So smile, be happy, and do something wacky!

Come on everybody, let's do the Macarena! Freshmen Caitlin O'Brien and Renee Woodruff take a chance on the new dance craze that's sweeping the nation. They know how it goes; put each hand out, then place them on the back of the head, then on the hips, let the lower body swing, then jump. Between it being performed by such names as Colin Powell, Janet Reno, and a bunch of congressmen, or having the entire Yankee stadium setting a world record by having the most people doing it at once, the Macarena has really left its mark. Will it still be remembered in 10 years? 20? 100?? It's hard to tell, but it was definitely popular this year, and there's no doubt that in years to come many small children will be staring at their parents as they try to explain how to dance the Macarena.

Ever have problems getting that last assignment done for English, or any other class for that matter? Freshman Jared Campbell uses those last precious moments on the bus to catch up on his reading. Though it may not be the quietest of places, it most definitely will do when one is in a jam and a grade is on the line. Students have been known to do many weird and unusual things when their homework is not done. Teachers' conversations often come from this very dilemma. The excuses used and the denial displayed can be very humorous, to those not involved. Wary of becoming the next subject discussed over lunch, Jared decided to get comfortable and spend the little time he had, finishing his homework. No matter where or how you get the job done, a job worth doing is a job worth doing well, right?

Once high school begins students begin shaping themselves into who they will be for the rest of their lives. Along with this change in lifestyle comes a change in attitude and social involvement. Kids meet new people and sometimes drift away from old friends in the process. And throughout all these changes, the students develop some idea of who they would like to become in the future. Freshman Riannon Maynard expects to become "...a really nice person. And I will be very nice to freshmen! Jokes!" Hmm... Other freshmen, like Donnie Soderstrom, have goals that are more on the serious side. "I'll be a more organized person..." It just goes to show that everyone is different in who they are now, and in who they will become.
Wait a second, the bathrooms aren’t co-ed! What are they all doing in there?! Freshmen Danny Majors, Erin Guthrie, Bobby Allen, and Tara Bolling gather in the restroom for a little playful lounging. You never can tell with freshmen!

Just a jumble of jargon...

The memory of being a freshman will be no more than a jumble of moments by the time we reach our senior year. First year students will take in their freshman year in the form of moments and memories. Freshman Danny Majors says that what he will remember most is, “being on the J.V. Basketball team.” Memories from the freshman year can be very different for each person. With different experiences there are different memories. Freshman Bobby Allen says, “I’ll probably remember the excellent band classes and pep band. The dentless tuba was the most wonderful thing I’ve ever seen.” Well, whatever a freshman’s memories are, each one is something that will always be treasured and remembered by the individual.

First day on the job!

The first day of high school most often gives the first impression that sticks with students throughout their years at Kayhi. If a student is shoved down the stairs, he will probably live in fear for the remainder of his life, but if he survives in one piece, he will most likely return the next day with no fear and energy enough to get through the years to follow. “I was worried that I would not know anyone, but other than that, [the first day] was fairly normal,” comments Trygve Westergard. Another freshman, Chris Nedzwecky, did all right his first day as well. “It was fun. I met some new people and saw all my old friends. I had trouble finding some classes, but other than that it was a cool day.” Looks like these freshmen got off easy! What lucky guys!
These three, the newest members to the Badminton Club of America, pose for their team shot. Freshmen Dana Jackson, Jason Nichols, and Jeffrey Williams are the three most vicious players, despite their tranquil appearance in front of the camera.

From the first day of kindergarten to the last day of the eighth grade, high school is a mystery and an adventure for every student. Unsure of what to expect, freshmen students trickle into their new school with anxiety and uncertainty. Will I get initiated? What if I can’t find the bathroom? Am I gonna look stupid trying to find my classes? Sounds scary doesn’t it?! But despite those freshmen who arrive in fear, there are those who look at high school in a whole different way. Lily Chenhall is one example. “I had no expectations, only curiosity.” Upon arriving, freshmen see that it isn’t so bad. High school is more than just big mean seniors, loads of homework, and grumpy teachers, it is the place where a student spends the best years of his/her life.

Below: Hey, I'm busy here! Caught in the act, freshman Lacy Williams gives a devious smile as she pretends to be one of the girls. Maybe Freud had the right idea.

Every year the time period between classes changes. This year's freshmen were blessed with short five minute passing periods in which they had to get their stuff, and still make it to class on time. And with the new tardy policy, being punctual is a big thing. Upon reaching their sophomore and junior year, the freshmen will have figured out the secrets of the passing game, but as the newbies, only a few manage to concoct a game plan to get to and from class on time and still get a few minutes of gab time. Nick Tucker is one such freshman. "I carry my backpack around so I don't have to carry my books. Then I can talk in the commons." There are lots of brains in that boy's head. Maybe he'll share some with next year's freshmen...
ACADEMICS

ASTRONOMERS
During Mr. Mogen’s biology class, sophomore Ruel Deleon works tirelessly on his cell lab, trying to observe and illustrate the mystical amoeba’s shape-shifting talents. Ruel focuses his microscope to get a better look at the pinkish tones and red dots which decorate this organism’s amazing pseudopods, which push in and out to move the amoeba along its way. Ruel’s lab partner takes notes while he waits for his turn to see the fascinating life in the primordial soup. The two students are really excited for this lab, which is the first of the year. Along with studying the fabulous protists, these biology students will also be learning how to correctly focus these incredibly expensive microscopes without crushing the helpless little organisms on the slide below. The life of a protist isn’t easy!

Assembling the equipment for the year’s first dance, seniors Troy Ertzberger and Chris Peabody install a powered mixer into a rack mountable box. Now, for all of those untechnical people who have no idea what that is, it’s a power source used for the stereo. This dance was sponsored by the swim and dive team who are raising money so that they can travel to the state competition in Anchorage in November. Some of the equipment is brand new since an extra one thousand dollars was added to the dance budget, making Kayhi’s dances some of the best in Southeast. Chris, who is chairman of the dance committee, helps to oversee the setup while Troy, who is an active member of the dance committee, gives a hand. With all of this great equipment, including the power amplifier and passive graphic equalizer, they know the dance is going to be rockin’!

Does this fallen mess of papers look familiar to anyone? Two senior class gentlemen, Ty Hewitt and Jon Stack, cordially pick up junior Heather Vimont’s books while Carly VanAart looks on. While ambling to 6th hour, the guys noticed their good gal pals in distress and gallantly offered to rescue the fallen papers. With his handsomely decorated hands, Jon organizes the papers into piles while Ty offers to hold them. Heather decides that she should probably clean up her act and begins tidying her locker. Carly scrutinizes her friend’s locker, devising a scheme to keep Heather’s locker neat, since those handy extra shelves are obviously not helping her to the very best of their ability. Locker laments plague Kayhi students year after year as they struggle to fit all their heavy new books into the limited space that’s provided.

Seen through the gleaming arc of a musical brass instrument, band teacher and conductor Mr. Bjur explains a new song for symphonic band. Students in Mr. Bjur’s classes are constantly on the lookout for new angles and interesting interpretations. Symphonic band is primarily made up of upperclassmen, who diligently practice for each concert of the year. Tuba player Spencer Crockett blows away, producing perfectly pitched notes, while the rest of the band completes a marvelous rendition of one of the many pieces they are working on this year, including The Canzonetta and Danny Boy. Paying close attention to their director, whose hands control the players’ every note, the band will continue to improve, producing flawless performances. The first concert of the year was a smashing success.
Above: Frustrated Jim Moran, who is a sophomore this year, uses the library computer to find out some information on his homework assignment. He mumbles as the screen comes up blank.

Right: Happy Mr. Hamlin smiles and waves as he is caught on camera actually using his computer for the first time in his teaching career as he does his homework for his classes the next day.

"I was kidnapped by mercenaries from Zimbabwe and made to do the Lambada with lab rats, so I didn't get back in time to do my homework," says junior Alec Dickinson when asked about his favorite excuse.

Below: Bewildered Mrs. Keizer explains to a student why she doesn't have their grades ready. Her excuse was that her twins had an accident on her keyboard so she couldn't finish her students' grades.
Hungry Aleyn Short, a mighty sophomore, spends her academic time eating instead of doing her homework for the next day. One of her many excuses is, "I was too busy eating, so I didn't do my homework." Below: Attentively Mrs. Tillotson's students stay after class to study hard or finish one of her never-ending tests. In Mrs. Tillotson's class after school, you will most likely see an over-crowded classroom.

Diligent Sarah Ohmer, a junior, works on her traumatizing homework. "Oh god! I'll never get this done!" she stresses on Monday morning before class. Maybe she should try using her academic time.

Below: Sing Jesse, Sing! No, Jesse don’t! C.J. Boyer looks upon Jesse Cannon as he serenades him with a chorus from Led Zeppelin’s “All My Love.” As one can see, the class takes their work very seriously.

Right: Jumping for Joy, Jerry Galley gets into character while setting up for the Ketchikan Theatre Ballet. What energy, what vibrance, what was he thinking? The stage crew works on school as well as local performances.

Right: Crawling away to safety, Landon Morgan attempts to escape the grasp of “Boochie,” the auditorium ghost. But don’t worry, “Boochie” in all the time he has haunted the auditorium, has never hurt anyone.

Left: Wake up! Ross Avila, impaled by a descending light bar, awakens from a deep sleep to find himself rendered helpless by his mischievous cohorts, Danny Anslinger and Jerry Galley.

Below: Stunned at his own superb playing ability, Caspian Brand takes a moment to reflect upon his vastly growing musical dexterity. Caspian is one of the second year recording technicians.

"What I like most about Production Technologies is Danny Anslinger's wisdom and Ross Avila and Jerry Galley's hysterical joking around," remarked Amy Dossett.

"Production Technologies"
Right: Why did I get myself into this, and what the heck does "hola" mean?! Junior Carly VanAart realizes that Spanish is one of the many classes in which concentration and hard work is a must, no matter how difficult it is.

Below: After a long and hard band rehearsal and having to get up at the crack of dawn, senior Jenni Fabrello just cannot seem to get out all of the jazzy tunes spinning throughout her head.

"I feel like the whole world is staring at me and my face turns all red," comments senior Jenny Cloudy when she realizes that even seniors can make mistakes.

Above: Trying to be sneaky sophomore Matt Wolf decides to go over to the microscope when he's not supposed to and hopes to discover new unidentified species.

Below: Academic time can come in handy just when one needs it. Paying careful attention to Mr. Dwyer's dangerous yet exciting lab, juniors Leon Ruaro and Rommel Deleon make sure they are getting their "A" for the day.

Above: Senior Marie Updike and junior Wendell Pahang ponder over a simple math problem which has stumped them for weeks. Junior Phil Jackson forgets about the problem and dozes off from a distance.
Below: Seniors Andy Berntson, Michelle McGinness, and Jennifer Wolf aren’t quite sure what makes this guy tick. Mr. Crockett, proudly sporting his fancy campaign signs, predicts the outcome of this November’s election.

Right: Yeah, we love our Mrs. Bloom, she’s the best English teacher we could ever ask for... admit seniors Pepper Browne and Robin Northrup. Mrs. Bloom can’t deny the fame she’s earned over her years here at Kayhi.

Above: This is tough stuff, Mr. Ortiz! Senior Anna Snyder just understands how the Catholic Roman Empire could fall without crushing a single civilian. And what about the tree in the forest...

Right: Getting in shape, Jimmy Carville and Gabe Easterly bunny hop wooden boxes in Mr. Maynard’s seventh hour personal fitness class. It’s just as important to keep your body fit as it is your mind, reminds Maynard.

Below: I don't know, can you take the bathroom pass? Ms. Patton certainly has no claims to normalcy here! And neither would you if you carried a smiling piece of lint back and forth from the bathroom!

When asked what class she could spend all day in, Erin Jakubek, a sophomore, said, "Mr. Pennington makes things a lot of fun to learn about, and he knows what it's like to be a kid."

Above: Flabbergasted Sean Seaver, a sophomore, is wisely instructed on last night's homework. This is Mr. Walker's second year teaching Consumer Math at Kayhi, but he has no problem staying a step ahead of the game.

Left: 20 year teacher at Kayhi, Mr. Pennington is among the best of the bunch. Also the proud owner of the world's ugliest collection of neckties, Mr. Pennington can always pull a smile from his large group of students.

225-8001 * 800 Venetia Ave.
Right: Students aren’t the only ones who learn in class, even teachers learn. Matt Wolf, a sophomore, teaches Mrs. Tanner, a substitute for Mrs. Hanson, a few computer tricks in the Office Practice room.

Below: Recapitulates..., reconnaissance...armed with a dictionary and a smile, Mrs. Bullock is ready to answer any questions that her students may fire in English class. What about deoxyribonucleic acid?

"Substitute teachers don’t always know what they are doing, but kids should give them respect because they are filling in for the teachers and they are trying to do their best."

-Lindsay Barry
Left: Working diligently on their assignment in math class, Jessi Gates, Leili Plasencia and Jim Moran strive to impress their substitute teacher. These sophomores are determined to prove that they are not slackers.

Below: Ready to explore the wonderful world of knowledge, David Zellmer and substitute Mrs. Munch sit attentively in history class. Mrs. Munch is known for her stories and her love of Ben and Jerry’s ice cream.

Below: Excited for her next class, Miss Crofcheck warmly welcomes her students into the photography room. An advantage of being a substitute is that with each new day comes a different group of students.

Left: Checking her shutter speed, Lynne Castillo is determined to show the substitute, Mr. Dolsky, her abilities as a photographer. Before he became a substitute, Mr. Dolsky was a student teacher for Mr. Ortiz two years ago.

Above: Pondering the past of man, Mr. West enjoys teaching the ancient civilizations and cultures of world history to students. Besides being a substitute, Mr. West also works as a Princess Tours tour guide in the summers.
Below: Striving for success is sophomore Hope Enright. She got a little behind on finishing last night’s homework, so she decided to sit quietly in the halls of Kayhi while other classes were session to finish up.

Right: Sophomore Awndrea Manning is a little sleepy from slaving all night on her homework, so she decides to take a quick nap while the other students of Kayhi are hard at work in their classrooms.

Below: Freshman Shannon Klaxon, Holly Cowley, and Andrea McClendon have just experienced their first time of skipping a class. Looks like they had a pretty good time by the smiles on their faces.

Above: Seniors Marsha Forty and Dayna Hert are unexpectedly discovered while trying to have a peaceful and quiet lunch at McDonalds, rather than trying to rush their lunch in a short thirty minutes in the crazy commons.

Above: Trying to make a quick get away before they are spotted are seniors Jennifer Dossman and Marie Updike. They decided to get a head start on lunch so they could have more time to chow and hang with their friends.
Above: Juniors Andrea Benner and Kris all get a little sidetracked socializing about what has been happening at school rather than working on their homework, which should have been turned in a long while ago.

When asked where her favorite place to skip is, Kim Thompson replied, "I like going to my friend's house so I can eat because school lunches just aren't long enough."

Below: Hoping nobody saw her, junior Tara Dillenburg thinks to herself as she decides to take her car for a quick spin down to the store. She has had a major doughnut craving ever since early this morning.
Top: Aren't you supposed to be smarter than the machine?
Jacob Fama, a sophomore, gets frustrated trying to find the Help Program. He decides to play the puzzle instead. Sometimes computers are difficult to work with.

Right: Sophomore Abel Piercy realizes that there is someone watching him as he pretends to destroy the hard drive on Mrs. Conley's computer. If anyone was to destroy a hard drive, it would take more than one class period.

Above: "Computers sure do allot for me. They help me do papers and make programs. The fun part is... you can get creative on the work wizard making all kinds of designs. Computers flat out are amazing!" stated senior Angie Lucas.

Below: Type in your user number, huh? User numbers are important to have since they protect your files. Mallissa Morris, a freshman, tries to remember hers while sitting in Career Explorations class.

Academics
Left: Programs can be hard to understand if Mrs. Conley or Mrs. Hanson doesn’t explain things to you. Demon Andrews, a sophomore, works on his new assignment for his course and can’t figure out what to do next.

Below: Senior Angie Collins types on her keyboard as quickly as she can to hopefully finish her assignment before the bell rings. Now, if she could concentrate over the noise that her other classmates are making.

Top: Not only do most students not understand how computers work, neither do some teachers. One of them is Mrs. Huntley. That’s why she is having the students surround her to explain things.

Left: Computers, computers, that’s all we have is computers. Sophomore Jesse Curran shows that she is one who loves these machines. Everyone should love computers because they are the key to the future.

Above: Playing his favorite game on the computer, sophomore Bob Bullock distractedly when he should be working on his report. The games are fun and interesting to play, but school work should come first.
Faculty Aliens
Spending a fun filled trip in a rustic cabin on the shore of Fish Creek is what Mr. Mogen, Mr. Ortiz, and Mr. Bolling (A.K.A. Larry, Curly, and Moe) had in mind for the weekend. Fate would have a different plan in store for these guys. They left early Saturday morning to catch those elusive Steelheads. On arriving at the creek, they were met with a discouraging sight; the lake was slightly frozen! Nothing could stop these courageous fishermen and they went up the creek to try anyhow. Moe and Larry stopped early while Curly pushed onward. After twenty minutes of this, the two decided to find the latter. They soon discovered him stuck on a drop-off point, one leg in and one leg out. After this event they traversed back to the cabin to play Acquire, a high financing game of bankruptcy. The next day they set up the camera to capture their catch (?) on film.

¡Buenos días, amigos! Señor Tickemyer celebrates Día De Los Muertos or, to those unfamiliar with the amazing language of Spanish, a happy Halloween. Although Mr. Tickemyer loves to speak Spanish, he’s always willing to translate. Mr. Tickemyer holds the honor of speaking five different and difficult languages; English, Spanish, German, French and Farsi. This knowledge allows Mr. Tickemyer to be prepared when he travels to other countries, like Mexico. He will be taking a group of his Spanish One students to Mexico, where they will be staying in the largest city in the world, Mexico City. They will also visit the Yucatan Peninsula and Isla de Mujeres, the Island of Women, near Cancun. They will also make an interesting visit to the ancient Myan ruins. So until then, adios amigos!

Toughing it through hurt noses, Mrs. Clement (Connie), Ms. Moody (Becky), Ms. Richardson (Lorel), and Mrs. Adams (Debbie) demonstrate ghoulish spirit by smiling while wearing their ferocious Halloween cat and pirate masks. These busy ladies are obviously more than thrilled to participate in the festive activities planned for the dynamic Kayhi office. Of course, clowning around isn’t the only thing that goes on in or out of this office. These busy bees are involved in many activities which fill every moment of free time. As for their thoughts on the students at Kayhi, this is what Mrs. Clement had to say. “The kids here are the best. If they weren’t here, I wouldn’t be here. But, you have to tap dance to be able to work in this office and keep up with the kids.” And girl can these ladies tap, tap, tap away.....

"See no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil." Taking their turn at a jolly monkey’s game, junior Maggie Majors and senior Aaron McDonald hang out with the terrifically wonderful physics teacher, Mr. Kralis. While Aaron tries to scar down his delicious red apple, Maggie keeps up the mysterious aura by secretly hiding her expressive mouth behind her bronze painted fingers. Mr. Kralis displays a confused and bewildered countenance, one that often greets his different physics and principles of technology students. The trio was hanging out in the science hall during break time when they decided to display their truly innocent, yet close-mouthed nature. Mr. Kralis is well-equipped with his sturdy pocket-protector and ridiculously wild and crazy tie. His students are used to his insane nature and terribly fun way of doing things.
Creepy Costumes

teachers reveal their ghoulish sides

"Several years ago I was a gypsy. Last year I was a drag queen from hell in a costume a student made for me." - Mr. Dwyer

When he was younger, Mr. Bjur dressed up as a hobo. His brother was dressed as Count Dracula and had an electric horn. A small kid came and knocked on the door. His brother opened the door and set off the horn, frightening the kid. The kid was scared so badly that he ran away without getting his candy saying "trick or treat." The boy then fell into a ditch as he scrambled to get away.

"One year we (a group of four teachers) came (to school) as trolls, and another year we came as coneheads. I came as a witch one time." - Ms. Conley

"When I was a kid we dressed up as hobos and burn our faces for beards." - Mr. Pennington

"Every year I come as an over-the-hill teacher." - Mr. Hamlin

Mrs. Patton's dad made her a shower curtain costume when she was younger. She loved it. The shower curtain surrounded her and on the very top was a spout which water came out of. On her feet she wore rubber flip flops.

Above: Longing to become a fashion model, Mr. Kralis shows off his wacky attire to prepare for the runway. With his gaudy tie and snazzy hair, he is sure to create the next fashion trend. This fall's styles are outrageous!

Right: After a long day of potion making and changing innocent children into toads, Ms. Farren is ready to fly home on her broomstick. However scary she looks, her students know that she isn't as wicked as she appears.
Above: Supervising every unified stroke, Ms. Dahle, the coxswain, coaches the men's JV 8 person team at Pacific Lutheran University. She is the eyes and ears of the boat. Whenever the team is victorious, the coxswain gets tossed in the water.

Left: With a secure grip on the side of the boat, Mr. Ortiz dreads the thought of plunging into the chilly waters of Fish Creek. Not one to sit in the cabin and sip hot cocoa, he ventured outside of the boat to try his luck at fishing.

Having Fun

teachers put their classrooms aside

"I do fishing and woodworking during the summer. They are very different than my job. When I am done, I can see that my project is complete." - Mr. Kennedy

"I do woodworking when I have time. I also do some mountain biking and reading. I also work with the local soccer league." - Mr. Kinunen

"I have children. I also run and enjoy doing crafts." - Ms. Richardson

Ms. Dahle likes to fish, make plans for her cabin, garden and tend house plants, and cook; especially desserts.

"I like to read and write. I do all sorts of crafts and I like to draw." - Ms. Woodruff

"I build furniture. I build a lot of end tables and coffee tables...things like that." - Mr. Beraldi

Mr. Kralis enjoys playing the guitar, photography, kayaking, and fishing. His next project is working on trying to get a sea kayak race established in Alaska.

"I enjoy running, swimming, biking, boating, reading, and at-home time." - Ms. O'Brien

"I like to read mysteries and suspense when I have time, birdwatch, cross country, and ski." - Mr. Mogen
Youthful Recollections

Remembering High School

I was an okay student. (I was) good in science and was on the varsity football team. I ran track and wrestled. Almost got caught painting our rival high school." - Mr. Dwyer

"I was outgoing and strange. I did have a reputation of a different sense of humor. I was the high school mascot. I was Chief Running Chicken." - Mr. Bjur

"I was shy and quiet. I got more outgoing toward my junior year. I was on the cheer team. I think Southeast Tournament my senior year was what I remember most." - Ms. Moody

My nickname was St. Peter. I was outgoing, involved and I hope I would be described as fun. I remember the day we won the (basketball) state championship in 1974 when I was a freshman. Everything was so big. It was very exciting and exhilarating." - Mr. Bolling

Mr. Ortiz remembers the time when he was winging a speech in front of the student body to run for Vice President. He bombed the speech because he wasn't as prepared as he thought he was.

"I was shy and quiet. I babysat and worked on an orchard selling apples." - Ms. Woodruff

Above: Traveling back to the year 1962, when Mr. Kinunen was only in high school, we see dances haven't changed much. Yes, the fashion and music have progressed, but girls still ask the guys to certain dances, such as to the Sadie Hawkins Dance.

Right: Proud to have finished high school, Ms. O'Brien is glad that it is all over. She can't wait to show the world what she is made of. After graduating, she continued her education at California State University in Sacramento.
"During the school year it takes a lot of time from family life. Sometimes we work long days and weekends." - Mr. Mogen

"I can spend the same holidays and vacation time as my children; that's why I'm here." - Ms. Richardson

"I'm lucky because my husband is also a teacher; therefore, we both put in a lot of hours towards our work. He understands how difficult it is sometimes. In the summer, however, we get to spend a lot of time together, so that is a benefit." - Mrs. O'Brien

"They (her family) expect me to know all the answers." - Ms. Woodruff

"Outside of school, teaching takes a lot of time. You have to grade papers and go on lesson plans; it really keeps you busy." - Mr. Kinunen

"My children just learned to be around teachers; that's probably why they did so well in school. When they were in high school, I taught them too. They always complain because I talk about them." - Ms. Bloom

"Teaching has really positive sides. It gives me a lot of family time during summer and after school." - Mr. Bolling

"It (working at the school) gives me more things to do with my family, like going to concerts and plays." - Ms. Moody

"It takes away the time I spend with my family because I have to grade a lot of papers." - Ms. Conley

"I think teaching affects my family life because it takes up so much time. It's also very stressful." - Ms. Keizer

SHOOTING STARS

Displaying their agility, freshman cheerleaders Melinda Schoening, Kristen Carlile, and Katie Hustead practice the Scorpion in the auxiliary gym. The cheerleaders attend a two hour long practice four to five days a week, where they work on dance routines for cheers, sideline cheers, and various stunts. Due to the addition of extra girls and guys, the cheerleading squad has had the opportunity to perform more routines. Practices enable the cheerleaders to be ready when it comes time to cheer for the swimming team, basketball teams, and wrestling team. In addition to the time spent on their long and grueling practices, the team also works on fund raisers which help supply them with the money needed to go on trips. In past years the cheerleaders have had the opportunity to travel to Southeast and a Cheerleading Camp in California.

Time out! The girls varsity basketball team huddles together to discuss their strategy. Playing a difficult game against Juneau, the team discusses their choices, ready to give it their all. In the last few seconds of the game, juniors Anna Updike, Sevai Autagavai, and Leslie Stanley listen intently as sophomore Christie Williams stands ready to receive her instructions. Seniors Jennifer Dossman, Nicole Deal, Bernadette Johnson, and Remalene Domingo face their coaches, sweat dripping in anticipation waiting for the next tactic. The coaches, Mr. Walker and Mr. Maynard, explain the game plan to the team, reminding them of every detail about the play. This is the first time in two years that the girls have beaten Juneau in a seasonal game. With the great talent they've got, this team is sure to win big.

Making waves in the otherwise placid water, junior Heather Vimont bursts through the cool, pale blue pool to take a breath while practicing the Breaststroke. Heather swims with resolution, determined to shave a second off her time. The breaststroke is Heather's primary stroke, and she took sixth place at regionals in Juneau. Heather has been part of the Ketchikan High School Swim and Dive Team for three years. The team practices for long hours every day, and on Saturdays. These difficult practices are important to the team since they help build the physical strength, endurance, and friendship needed to perform well at the meets. The closeness the team shares was one of the primary reasons they won the Best Sportsmanship Award at regionals.

Right: Senior cheerleader Vera Hull stays balanced in a full extension with Freshman Gabe Duckworth and Senior Terra Sirevog spotting carefully. The lady mascot dances in front of them to help Vera work the crowd.

Did you know...?

Up until 1956 our school had a song queen. The song queen would dance to the school song and other songs the pep band played, and even once while the game was on!

The cheerleaders at the time of the song queen were called Yell Kings and Queens.

Yell Kings and Queens and the song queens were selected each year by the student body.

An old principal of the school was a cheerleader; there was even a picture of her in the display case. When the students discovered the picture was of her, she took it out of the case the very next day.

This year's cheerleading squad was invited to go to a national competition in Florida!

The 1996-97 cheer team is the largest the school has ever had, with 33 members.

Right: Dog pile!! The 1996-97 cheerleading team piles in for a team shot. Those crazy girls are doing a ton of cool stunts and cheers this year, so be ready to get out of your seat and cheer with them at the games.

Above: Our wonderful and loving lady mascot shows her affection for kids by entertaining a little girl during a game. She outstretches her arms to the world, ready to hug or laugh with anyone who walks by.

Above: "We're from Kayhi, couldn't be prouder..." senior cheerleaders Karen Youngblood and Robin Morrison scream their hearts out on the sidelines to get our great Kayhi crowd into the game.

Look out below! Senior boxerheads, Jon Stack and Brian Elliott, watch as junior Alec Dickinson assists the wild and wacky senior, Danny Anslinger, in a slam dunk. This totally amazing stunt was performed during a break in the Ketchikan vs. Charles Hayes game in which we kicked butt. Members of the boxerheads are Seniors Danny Anslinger, Jon Stack, and Brian Elliott, junior is Alec Dickinson, sophomore Jimmy Parrot, and freshman Stephen Beedle.

Team Captains: Erik Christensen and Carly VanAart

Left: Leaving solid ground behind, senior Dan Patton soars over the blue water. Swimming all of his four years at Kayhi, he hopes to continue swimming competitively after high school and through college.

Far right: Blasting off from the side, sophomore Jennifer Gilson begins her trek across the pool and starts her second year swimming for the Kayhi swim team. Jennifer has found that she excels in the 500 Freestyle.

Below: Sneaking an apple between events at the Ketchikan meet, Miriam Vimont strengthens herself for the 200 Individual Medley in which she took first place. Overall, the Ketchikan girls took second place at their first meet.
Left: Working to get ahead, junior Heather Vimont starts the 100 breast stroke. Every hundredth of a second counts. During Southeast Tournament, the whole team shaves all body hair that is not covered by their suit.

Below: Team manager Naomi Shipman keeps time for the Individual Medley while junior Erik Christensen takes a rest after an intense swim. Swimming takes hard work but a Kayhi swimmer knows it is worth it.

Did you know?
The Kayhi swimmers swim an equivalent of 225 miles in a season.

The Kayhi swim team placed fourth overall at regionals this year.

At regionals, Kayhi won the sportsmanship award for the support they gave one another and the spirit they displayed in those cool yellow T-shirts!

To the right: In astonishment, the crowd watches as a runner goes down in the harsh Ketchikan terrain. Taking advantage of the fallen Juneau runner, Chris Van Styke and Joseph Trettevik advance into competitive positions.

Top left: Just pushing it another mile, Spencer Crockett and Mike Lyshol dig deep for all they have left. Spencer and Mike are two of Kayhi's most dedicated runners who consistently give one hundred percent in practice everyday.

It's a little known fact that each Kayhi Cross Country runner runs approximately 200 miles in one season. That means that if the cross country team held a relay with each runner running 200 miles, that would be a 4,800 mile relay. That's far enough to go from Ketchikan to Tokyo, from Ketchikan to Mexico City, or from Ketchikan to Bermuda. That's a long way!

Below: "On your marks!" shouts the official. At the line, Kayhi's Alice Cook, Melanie Crevier, and Olga Tanner mentally prepare themselves for the home meet in which the girls' team took third place. Rock on girls.

Kayhi Cross Country is Going to Pump You Up!

Boys Captains: Danny Anslinger and Andy Berntson

Girls Captains: Marika and Tansy Middag

Bottom left: Lovey, dovey Cross Country Captain Danny Anslinger is an animal on the course. When he's not enjoying a nice leisurely race, he likes to take extended bike rides, walks on the beach, and watching Mallrats.

Bottom right: After a long day on the course, Liandra Danner, Melanie Crevier, Erin Jakubek, and Alice Cook kick it at a beach on Prince of Wales after running at a meet in Craig. The girls placed first at the meet after a hard week of practice.
Right: Like soldiers marching onto the field, Chris Van Slyke, Mike Lyshol, Joe Trettevik, Steve Beedle and Spencer Crockett stride down the road with confidence as onlooking teams turn from the power displayed by the Kings.

Below: As boys Captain Danny Anslinger triumphantly holds his position in third place, he glides into a position at state. Captain Danny finished his race at Southeast with a time of 17:13. That's 3.2 miles in less than 18 minutes!

Above: Making his last desperate attack at the finish line, 'Baby Bug' Steve Beedle digs deep for every ounce of energy he can find. He was the only freshman on the Kayhi boy's team to qualify for state. Right on Steve!

Top Right: After his final race, senior Chris Van Slyke reflects upon his performance. Away from the crowd he catches his breath before congratulating his teammates. This is Chris' first year on Cross Country and he ran Varsity all season.

Above: "Where is everyone?" Melanie Crevier asks the crowd as she burns her way around the course. Melanie’s positioning in the South East meet helped qualify the Kayhi girls for another trip to state rounding off their season.

Left: Only a few more steps, says Brie Kenoyer to herself as the last few feet of the race unfold in front of her. She was one of two freshmen girls on the team at the Region Five meet here in Ketchikan; the Kayhi girls qualified for state.

Right: Marie Updike serenades her triumphant teammates as they celebrate their '97 Southeast Title. Taking first place in S.E., the girls end the season by defeating Juneau, the returning champs, by an unbelievably large margin.

Below: V-i-C-T-O-R-Y, THAT'S OUR KAYHI BATTLE CRY!!! belts out Katie Poet, Alia Plasencia, and Eli Lemay at the boys championship game. It's hard work, but there is nothing as exciting as getting the crowd pumped up at a basketball game.

Right: Number 22, Jason Nelson, takes it up against Juneau's top dog, Carlos Boozer, in the championship 4A game. Jason has played well for Kayhi all year. Despite a valiant effort by the boys, they came up a few points shy in the end.

Left: Kayhi Pep Club, instigated by the infamous Boxerhead syndrome, yells, cheers, and astounds spectators everywhere with their ear splitting, decibel pounding, school spirit. With well over a hundred members, it's not surprising that their school spirit is a force to be reckoned with.

Far Left: Unsung hero Bernadette Johnson takes her turn cuts down the hoop after the Lady Kings conquered the basketball teams in southeast. Triumphant through dedication, the girls are ready to take on State.
Do You Wanna Play Drill?

k-highlites doin' it again!

Above: Oh my... what is she thinking? Is her mouth supposed to be open that wide? Junior Jaylyn Thomas gets into the drill by mouthing the words to the song while freshman Jamie Luuelyn just smiles in the background as she performs her best.

Right: 5, 6, 7, 8, and jump! Freshmen Nicole Carlin and Tennille Walker work on their preps to get good heights on their toe touches. By the end of the year they should have perfect toe touches because they are part of every practice.

Above: Junior Nisha Carlin and sophomores Becca Diverty and Erin Jakubek have experienced the consequences of not wearing knee pads. As one can see, knee pads are a necessity to avoid injuries and bruises upon their knees.

Did you know...
* In the summer '96, the K-highlites went to the Miss Dance and Drill Competition in Long Beach, California and were led by coaches Angie Oaksmith and Abby Kosmos. They were placed 1st out of 21 teams by two of the three judges.
* This last summer junior Lindsay Sharp, senior Angie Lucas, and the Captains went to Western Washington University in Bellingham, Washington for a Universal Dance Association dance camp. They won the Best Leadership Award as a group and the Superior Ribbon award for receiving the highest ranked ribbons for an excellent job in dancing.
* Senior Jenny Clody travelled to Paris, France this December; she was picked as a Universal Dance Association Allstar. She had to make up part of a routine and perform it by herself. Good job!
* The K-highlites were picked in the summer of '96 to go to the U.D.A. Nationals at Disney World in Orlando, Florida. U.D.A. is the most prestigious competition in the U.S., but the drill team happened to decline. They plan on going back to Long Beach to take first in the "Small Military" category. Good luck girls!!
Right: She's coming through and there's no stopping her. Taking it all the way to the hoop and trying to fight her way through those Juneau Bears, senior Nicole Deal finds every way possible to get around them.

Below: Appearing out of nowhere, junior Anna Updike jumps from behind and tries to grab hold of the ball. Putting all her weight into it, she just isn't going to let go of this ball until it's secure in her hands.

Lady Kings

When the Lady Kings traveled to East Anchorage, they placed 3rd in the season tournament.

POST-CHRISTMAS EVENTS:

- The girls plan on attending a National Invitational Tournament in San Diego.
- The girls are hosting and are the defending champions of the Lady Kings Invitational.
- All seven seniors are being recruited for athletic scholarships and academic scholarships. By Christmas Nicole Deal was the first to commit to Carroll College for basketball and academic scholarships.

Right: Backing up her teammate, junior Andrea Benner does everything she possibly can so that senior Remalene Domingo can quickly retrieve the ball from going out of bounds.
Below: Check out that form! Senior Marika Middag follows through, hoping to make the shot. The fans sit and wonder if it is going to go in or not. Of course it will, cause we’re the Kayhi Kings.

Far Below: Getting ready for the rebound is junior Sevai Autagavaia. She is pushing her way to the basket as fast as her feet will carry her to the hoop. She isn’t going to let that ball get away.

The 1996-97 Lady Kings Captains are Remalene Domingo and Nicole Deal.

Above: Listening to what coach Maynard has to say are team members senior Bernadette Johnson, Tansy Middag, Marika Middag, and Nicole Deal, junior Anna Updike, Leslie Stanley, Andrea Benner and Sevai Autagavaia, and sophomore Kristle Williams.

Left: Work baby work! The crowd sure did get a surprise when their regular sparkling and shining drill team didn’t appear, but a show just as great was the performance by the guy’s team, Jojo Villafior, Carillo Villameva, and Ariel Manabat. Not pictured are Alfredo Romero and Emar Sebado.

Right: Getting a pep talk before heading back onto the floor are junior Leslie Stanley, sophomores Barbie Hull, Trista Bloom, Tristan Robinson, Fe Villanueva, Charisa Nicholas, and Angela Wade.

Far right: Using the shooting form that she has worked so very hard on in practice is sophomore Kristie Williams trying to dodge those Crimson Bears.

Kings Are Coming

The 1996-97 JV Captain is Sara Caskey.

Above: While the crowd watches in suspense, sophomore Barbie Hull stops to take her best shot, hoping that the Crimson Bears won't come and steal the ball.
Left: Trying to give the ball away before someone on the other team steals it, junior Sara Caskey quickly searches for another team member she can give control to.

Scrapes, bruises, and spirit

The purpose of the JV and Freshman Team is to build fundamentals and the competitive spirit to be successful at the varsity level. When it comes to heart, these kids definitely have it.

When you watch the JV games, there is an incredible amount of competition that goes into these games. There are girls that dive after the ball, get skinned up knees and elbows, and keep playing as if nothing ever happened.

As coach Walker says, "These girls wear bruises like badges of courage."

Juneau and Ketchikan are the biggest rivals in Southeast Alaska, so when these girls play against each other, it is sure to be a pretty competitive game. The last couple of years that they have played Juneau they may have lost, but if they did, it wasn't by much, so watch out!!!

Above: Running out on the court to meet her other team members after their victory against the Juneau Bears is sophomore Amanda Stidd. She is definitely excited along with Coach Maynard, who seems to be very relieved.

Left: Doing everything in her power to not let this ball get into the wrong hands is junior Leslie Stanley. She is really looking to take the victory against those Bears.
Right: Power-house Casey Nelson goes up on three Sitka players. With amazing strength, speed and agility, he takes them all to the hole. For all those non-basketball buffs, he scored over all three of his defenders.

CONSTELLATIONS
"Dorine?!" A bountiful conversation is ceased when senior Caspian Brand, as Orgon, silences the spicy maid, senior Amy Trettevik as Dorine, and her response to his daughter’s forced marriage. The plot of Tartuffe centers around a poor con-artist and his tactics of coercing Orgon to submit to his evil plan- to marry his daughter and obtain the family’s wealth. The play originates in the 18th century and is fragrantly rich with humor and skepticism. Tartuffe contrasts this year’s earlier production, The Good Doctor, in which an author randomly shares his written works. The Good Doctor comes from the early 19th century and vacillates between humor and tragedy. The plays were fiercely directed, blocked and presented by Ms. Patton and Mr. Sullivan, both of whom are drama teachers.

George Winston, Stevie Wonder, Picasso? Playing piano since she was seven, senior Jennifer Fabrello takes after historical pianists of the past. Diligently practicing her latest challenge, Jenni lets her fingers flow to the rhythm of the music. Not only is she an accomplished pianist, she can also play a variety of different instruments such as clarinet, oboe, and more than one type of saxophone. She has also experimented with violin, tuba, and bassoon. Ketchikan High School’s music program has enabled Jenni to pursue her music career and has allowed her to expand her musical repertoire. Her mentor, Mr. Bjur, has not only inspired Jenni but many others over the years. Once she graduates from Kayhi, Jenni plans to attend the University of North Texas where she will become a teacher of future generations.

Those crazy ACDC kids! What do they think they’re doing? Is this what they learn at all those meets; to become Yoga masters? Obviously sophomores Jacob Fama, Tim Curral, Hallie Engel, Annie Fisher, Jesse Curran, and Cara Wallace learned from the best, the upperclassmen! Never missing an opportunity to fool around, juniors Laura Rosendin, Robin Miller, and Maggie Majors caught cabin, um, locker fever. Reminiscing about the Burger King Playland, senior Teya Plamondon just couldn’t resist instigating the entire situation. This group managed to nab the first person who happened to walk by and cajoled him into taking this rare picture of ACDC hard at work. Not putting anything past these locker nuts, one has to wonder what was in the other two shut lockers. Mr. Kralis, perhaps?

The carebears of Ketchikan, senior Carol Schafer and sophomore Elizabeth Kloxin, bought everyday essentials for over twenty nine families through Rotary Interact. Carol and Elizabeth had help from ten to twelve more students who cared enough to lend a helping hand to the community. Ignoring the inquisitive glances they received from people in the store, they marched on, jamming up the aisles with eight carts, all full to the brim. The task of putting together the packages took a couple hours to complete, but the making of an assembly line sped up the long process. In gratitude, one woman started to cry tears of happiness for the gift, a sign of how much Rotary Interact is appreciated. And as for all the donated money, Interact has Rotary, the Lutheran Brotherhood, and A&P to thank for the twelve hundred dollars that made this happen.
What is your favorite part about acting?

After he was asked about his acting, senior Matt Beimler thought a little bit about what makes acting a special thing for him. "The thing about acting that is the best is the intensity. I like the way it makes people forget themselves when they're performing true to their character. And just really showing the audience everything. You'll meet the most unique people of any class in the drama department."

Most people have different reasons for wanting to act and perform on the stage. When asked what it is about acting that draws him to the stage and makes him willing to go through all the hard work it takes to put on a play, freshman Anthony Martinez answered, "I don't have to be myself, I can act like whatever the part is. It gives me something to do after school."

Acting on the stage can be a lot of fun, but anyone who has been involved in plays knows the most fun can be found backstage. While sophomore Tim Currall knows the importance of acting, he also knows when to have fun. "Acting is fun because I enjoy pretending I am somebody that I am not. I also enjoy making other people laugh. It is also fun to sneak up on the catwalk and throw stuff at people."

Acting can be a lot of work, but as with most things, there's always fun to be had. It's obvious that senior Dustin Shull thinks the joy and gratification he receives from drama easily overrides the difficulties. "It gives me the chance to be other people who I'm not normally. I can be anyone from any time or place. I love acting as someone else; it gives me a sense of their needs and feelings."

Like many other activities, drama offers a lot of benefits. Between the people and the roles, it's easy to have a great time acting. Freshman Tiffany Gillian knows the importance of being in an activity that gives her satisfaction and allows her to really have some fun. "I like the people. It gives me something to do. I like the new experiences and pretending you're somebody else. It's fun."

Above: Take Two! While practicing their performance, sophomore Chloe Snyder, portraying a crazy woman, begs for money as junior Alec Dickinson, the banker, winces in pain.

Right: Slowly making his way to the park bench on a beautiful sunny afternoon, senior Matt Beimler displays a thoughtful countenance. He is on his way to meet and argue with his long time debate buddy.

Below: Sitting all alone on a park bench, junior Laura Rosendin portrays an old woman who is looking for love after the death of her husband. She listens to the speech given by a fellow widower.

What is your most embarrassing singing experience?

"It was during the first quarter of the school year and we were singing Danny Boy," junior Melinda Harper stated. "I was singing with the Alto I and I tried to sing a really high note that I wasn't supposed to. My voice cracked. Thank goodness it wasn't really noticeable. A few people in the Alto section realized that it was me and they just looked at me really funny."

"It was towards the end of a song, where we were all supposed to sing really loud," sophomore Destiny Dawson declared. "I was looking down when Mr. Hughes gave us the signal to cut off. The whole choir stopped singing, but I was still singing my part really loud. Everybody stared at me and started laughing. I don't like to show off my voice, so I was really embarrassed."

Devastated, junior Mark Albrecht described, "It was last year and I was supposed to be singing in class, but instead I was just goofing off, so Mr. Hughes made me stand up in front of the whole choir and sing in front of everyone. I didn't really know the song very well, so I had to just sing any line that came to mind. It was really embarrassing."

"It was during the Music Festival," sophomore Ashley Byrd exclaimed, "We were singing Ave Maria and right in the middle of taking a breath, I took a big ol' yawn. Some of the members of the audience noticed, including my neighbor who teasingly said, 'I saw you yawn. You could have ruined the whole thing.' I was really relieved that it wasn't shown on television."

"Mr. Hughes had to stop right in the middle of the song we were singing and made us review the music again, just because of me. I messed up really bad," junior Sarah Rettke said. "I sang the wrong note in rehearsal and everybody quit singing and just looked at me, including Mr. Hughes. I turned bright red. However, I did get it right the second time."
Below: The choir takes a relaxing stretch break to prepare themselves for the big concert. First row, left to right: Ashley Byrd, Tangie Pattison, Christina Lawrence, Samuel Fox. Fourth row: Kim Smith.

concert choir

225-3650 * 2400 Tongass Ave.
Below: Standing up on the big auditorium stage can be a little scary to some, but this year's jazz choir shows no fear, standing tall with confidence and presenting their wonderful voices to the crowd.

Right: With their hair all spiffy and those cute little choir robes, the treble choir is once again pleasing the community and friends with another of their great performances. Keep up the good work girls!

Below: Do Re Mi Fa! Okay, you know the rest. Seniors Jamie King, Jon Stack, and Dan Dunham, along with juniors Joe Trettevik and Alec Dickinson, follow the music very carefully so that they don't lose their note.

Often it takes a while for people to realize their abilities and take the initiative to expand upon them. Senior Amy Dossett explains that once she joined choir, she knew it was something she would want to do. "I have always sung around the house, but I didn't begin choir until I was thirteen and in the sixth grade. I enjoy singing because it makes me feel good about myself, and it is a good way of expressing my feelings."

Sometimes something as simple as watching television can give you good ideas. Proving that TV's not all bad, sophomore Kathy Osburn describes the benefits she got from it. "I was in the third grade and I watched a lot of TV and I liked show tunes, so I'd always sing them. Ever since then, I've memorized every show tune and Mom said that I was good, so I just kept singing. And that was that."

Though many people want to become musicians, others prefer to lead the orchestra. Freshman Norman Erickson knows that behind the podium is the place for him. "I began singing when I was in the fourth grade. Ever since I can remember, I have always enjoyed hearing, making, and writing music. My dream is to someday become a musical director. All I can do is pray that my dreams will someday come true."

Sometimes lifelong goals and dreams can come to life if enough work is put into them. Knowing this, junior Tiffany Stone is willing to put in the time. "I have been singing for as long as I can remember. I have always wanted to become a popular singer. I sang in elementary school and after my first practice, I loved it so much, I just kept enrolling in choir. Now I'm in jazz choir and it's a wonderful class."

Finding out how people become involved in their activity is always interesting. When sophomore Sarah McElroy was asked about her past, she had the answer ready. "I've been singing in my spare time ever since I was a little girl. It has always been my life long dream to be a singer when I get older. Everybody would constantly tell me I had a good voice, and that I should join choir. Eventually I convinced myself to join."

Left: Hit that beat! Juniors Jamin Soderstrom, Derek McGarrigan, Jim Carlile, and Jeremy Mutart use up all of their air to hit that perfect brassy sound. Let’s hope that they do not pass out during the game!

Left: Let's get rocked! The Kayhi King mascot gets the crowd pumped up for the game. It's always fun to see our King and the Lady King dance around on the floor. What would we do without them?

Below: She works so fast! Sophomore Olga Tanner creates a poster in no time flat. Could this be her specialty? Who knows, but the commons sure was filled with posters with the help of the Pep Club.

How does your club contribute to the spirit of Kayhi?

They are Proud and Loud and ready to rock! Junior Matt Caskey gets into the groove and knows that, "The music wakes you up because it is really fast and fun to play. This stuff is not everyday music that people hear. It is loud and it puts you in the mood to want to win the game. I guess it really peps everyone up and makes them want to jump out of their seats and scream their loudest!"

"Pep Band can contribute a lot to the spirit of Kayhi. Music makes it more fun at the games because it is louder and more interesting. Sometimes the trombones get really wild when they play... and some of the tuba players put things on their instruments. I guess it is the most spirited group at the games, even more spirited than pep club... sometimes," comments freshman Leigh Grundy.

"Pep Club is the base of all school spirit in Kayhi. There are about as many people in the Pep Club as there are on all the teams combined, so nobody can say we are not an important part of the school. And besides, it is a heck of a lot of fun if you really get into it!" Being the secretary of Pep Club, junior Sara Allen recognizes the effect that Pep Club can have on the school.

"Pep Club has given Kayhi students a sense of pride in their school. The Pep Club lets people express their school spirit more openly and freely. Since I am on the new Pep Club staff I know that being involved with the school is important and with other people seeing me as part of the staff, it makes them want to get involved too," junior Trevor Hook explains the ways of Kayhi spirit.

"Pep Band is the majority of the group in the crowd at the basketball games. It is our job to get the crowd pumped up and to cheer loud so our Kayhi basketball team can show 'em their stuff. The crowd can sometimes consist of a few people that are not into the cheering bit, but I guess it is okay just to sit, relax, and enjoy the game!" Sophomore Trista Linder obviously enjoys the spirit of Pep Band.
What are some of the funny moments in band?

Senior Jenny Brown feels that, "Class is really strange, people are always making bald jokes about Mr. Bjur. The funniest things that happen are when I make a mistake and it is really noticeable. Me and the person that sits next to me laugh about it for the rest of the hour!" Giggles are an everyday part of band class to some, whether it is cracking jokes about the teacher's hair-do, or just plain messing up!

"On Halloween of my sophomore year, Chris VanSlyke, Luke Schwartz, and I decided to dress up like Mr. Bjur. We sat in the back of band with bald caps on and penciled in mustaches. We went the entire period without him seeing us. He finally noticed us when we were walking out the door!" Remembers senior Chris Peabody thankful of the fact that he got away just in time.

"Perhaps my most unusual experience as the Kayhi band director occurred during the first Lightweight Concert I conducted here in the old auditorium. For the final number I had to repel down from the balcony on a rope while wearing a Tarzan suit and long underwear. I think my hair loss began soon after that event. Directing band can be a hair raising experience," reflects Mr. Bjur on his past.

Why Do You Enjoy Band?

Because music plays a major role in his life and it is important to him, James Hull explained his artistic endeavors on which he bases his love of music on, "I like band, it is a way to express myself musically. I like to perform in concerts, in front of people, and I like to share the experience with my classmates." He told us his plans for a possible career in music, "Not now, but I would like to be in a jazz band."

Having participated in the band program, Freshman Anthony Martinez gave us a little insight on why he likes it. "It gives me something to look forward to when I go to school," he explained. Like many band members, he likes to perform in concerts and sees his involvement in band as a pathway to improving himself. "Since I am involved in band, it could help me get into college," he told us.

Another musically inclined freshman who is a freshmen band member, Jed Michael explained his outlook on band, "It is a good activity for people to do, and I have enjoyed it." When asked if he wanted to be a professional musician he replied, "Probably not. I would like to, because I enjoy doing it, but I'm not very good." No lounge act in the making from this student.

A dedicated musician, Charlene Spurgeon told us about her band experiences and explained, "I wouldn't be very involved in many activities if I wasn't in band." Her four years of experience gives her an edge on less experienced players, "I enjoy band because it is something that I excel in," she told us. In the future she would like to be an orchestral director or a musician. Either way she hears music in the distance.

A flutist and member of concert band, sophomore Beth Sarvela has been involved in music for six years. We asked her how band has affected her life and she said, "I appreciate music more." Whether it increases her musical appreciation or the satisfaction that she gets when she finally learns a piece well, she's positive about her current musical status. Even though she enjoys music, she doesn't want to be a musician.
Below: Playing in band is not all fun and games, as Steven Beedle and Tiffany Gillian show us how hard they work to become great musicians. Putting in practice time and doing scales are some of the ways they can reach their goals.

Right: Tuning up for a concert, Alexis Pahang, Danny Majors, Tom Byron, and Allison Gelbrich prepare themselves for the stage during the holiday concert. After all the time they put in, they finally have the chance to show it all off.

Below: Congratulations! Senior Mandy Davis inducts junior T.C. Oubatayao to the National Honor Society while junior Jaylyn Thomas daydreamed about plans she has for the near future.

Why Did You Join SBA/NHS?

Freshman Class officer Tennille Walker told us why she wanted to be a member of SBA, "I joined SBA because I thought that it would be a lot of fun, a lot of hard work, and I wanted to make a difference in the school year." As Secretary Treasurer of the Freshman class, she has been able to do many things to benefit the school, like recycling committee and several other committees.

What is it about being a member of National Honor Society that appeals to so many students? When junior Danielle Ludwigen was faced with this question, she responded with, "Because I wanted to wear one of those neat things, and it looks good on my college applications." Tassels at graduation and parts of a resume seem to spark motivation in all NHS members.

Vice-President of the class of 2000, Ethan Berto joined SBA as a family commitment, "I joined SBA because my sister told me it was going to be fun." Maybe he didn't know what he was in for when he ran for office. The extra hours spent at school, clean up after activities, and a never ending circle of meetings are just some of Ethan's responsibilities. His sister was right, he would have fun serving in this position.

"I guess I wanted to be in National Honor Society because it's a great honor and it looks good on college applications, but most of all it makes me look smart! Everything helps when it comes to college. Who knows? This could be my ticket to a good school," replies junior Erin Doorn about being part of the National Honor Society. It's not always easy to get accepted into a college one wants, but the little things help.

President of the Freshman Class, Angela Pfeifer, spoke of her drive to become the leading authority of the class of 2000, "I wanted to make this year the best," she said about her campaign. Unfortunately, if she makes her freshman year the best, what will she have to look forward to in the next three years? But as far as she is concerned, she will do what it takes for her classmates.

Below: Spreading knowledge everywhere she goes, junior Vivian Sweet, an active AIDS Awareness member, helps educate Kayhi as well as the rest of the community about AIDS.

Right: Rico Suave, biology teacher and Interact advisor, Mr. Mogen, takes time out of his busy schedule to do a little shopping spree for the senior citizens of K-Town.

Left: Smiling contentedly after doing a very good deed is junior Lindsay Barry. Participating in Interact and getting to help people can give people a warm and fuzzy feeling inside.

What does your club do for the community?

The new advisor for Interact, Mr. Mogen, took over for Jeff Budd, who moved quite a few years ago. Mr. Mogen seems not to mind helping them out. When asked how the club he advises makes a difference in the community, he replied with an incredibly long list of good deeds. "Umm...toy drive, separating cans in the canned food drive, buying stuff (non food) for the seniors in the community, garbage pick up..." the list goes on.

"We spread awareness through demonstrations and knowledge." If you wondered why on December first all those people wore black and painted their faces, junior Amy Rockwood tells it like it is. "Like on World AIDS Day, AIDS Awareness task force had a demonstration in which they represented Americans that contracted the AIDS virus. One person every fifteen minutes in America gets AIDS."

"Interact helps out by helping others and cleaning up the community. The haunted house at halloween was my favorite. Lots of families came and I loved seeing the kids," freshman Dana Jackson reports with a smile. Dana is glad that she heard about Interact and joined. Like most Interacters, she finds it rewarding and will continue to help her community throughout high school and the rest of her life.

A lot of people in AIDS Awareness realize that because of the size of our community people don't worry about AIDS. Junior Laura Rosendin says, "With our task force we're aiming to spread awareness through our school and community. A lot of people that live here don't think of AIDS as a problem because we're so isolated, but it's a deadly disease and we are working to make sure it's not ignored."

What does senior Aaron McDonald do in Interact to help better the community? "We're doing Southeast Senior Services right now. We are a volunteer group of six or seven people. We help the elderly with things they can't do, and sometimes elderly people just need somebody to talk to or help around the house because they're lonely. And that's what we do!" Sounds like Interact has got it going on!
How do you handle deadlines?

Associate editor for this year's williwaw (yearbook) staff, junior Debi Day, tried to rationalize and give a good answer at the same time, "I get really creative and then I go insane," which is very understandable for anyone who has ever had a deadline to meet. Often times the editors go unappreciated in both yearbook and newspaper, but without their help the staff members and photographers couldn't get along.

Kayhi's recent addition of the school newspaper has some kids scrambling to keep up with the ever changing deadlines. Junior Maggie Majors explained how she handles deadlines, "They're scary! I never do anything in advance....either it's me and my computer at 4 a.m. or a zero in the grade book!" Walking away with the ability to handle deadlines will come in handy in the future.

Senior, Nick Dyakanoff, bluntly and truthfully told us how he does with deadlines, "...not very well." Nick is one of the six fantastic photographers that make the yearbook possible. Without the photographers, the yearbook would be a mess of articles and faceless names. The newspaper and yearbook is a coalition of dedicated staff members, editors, and photographers that have to work together for a common goal.

From the junior class, Robin Miller, who is the newspaper editor, told how she handles deadlines by confessing, "I'm the editor, so I just sit back and hope they will turn their work in on time." The last time the newspaper was in print was 1988; it was called the K-Items, now it is called, Kayhi Times. Ms. Woodruff, the new librarian, is the new advisor following in the footsteps of Nancy Hudson.

"How do I handle deadlines?" Lindsay Sharp, from the class of '98, tried to figure out the best way to explain the stress that goes into the yearbook each year. "...trying not to kill anyone, I get stressed, but I just try to get it done as calmly as I can." Deadlines often come at the worst time in yearbook; around Christmas break and the first few weeks after returning from break are the major deadlines.

Right: Trying her best to keep busy, junior Whitney Tenney, a photographer on the yearbook staff, looks around too see if anyone needs her help. Whitney is one of the many wonderful photographers on staff.

Below: Mrs. Woodruff, the librarian and advisor for the newspaper, works diligently on a new edition of the Kayhi Times. Much thanks is due to her, otherwise there wouldn't be a newspaper.

Above: Watching the fun and games in yearbook are juniors Sarah Ohmer and Debi Day, and seniors Larissa Hebel and Nick Dyakanoff, bringing in a new semester.

Right: On the cutting edge are juniors Nisha Carlin and Lindsay Barry, hard at work trying to meet what are understandably called 'dead'lines. Newspaper and yearbook both know what those are like.

Right: Working really hard are juniors Erik Christensen and Amanda Machado of the newspaper staff. It can help to look at the local paper for some handy tips and interesting story ideas.

How has participating in this club benefitted you?

Sophomore Hallie Engel is new to Academic Decathlon this year. "Joining ACDC has been a lot of work, but also a lot of fun. It's interesting to learn about the topics from your study guides and then see how much you remember at test time. The week long trip that we take to Anchorage for the State Competition isn't bad either."

"The people on our debate team are all very interesting; we are all friends. We are under a lot of stress, so we can see the real sides of everyone. The debate meets are a lot of fun, and it's nice to meet people from different places. When you go to a couple of meets, you start to become friends with the people you debate against." -Jessi Gates

"The best thing Academic Decathlon has done for me is that it gave me a vacation earlier this year when we went to Juneau. I had a lot of fun when I wasn't studying for the competition. It was an enjoyable experience, except when Tim Curran was whining about how cold it was. I can't wait for the fun to begin next year." -Jacob Fama

"The most exciting thing about debate is when you are actually debating someone. You're standing in front of the judge and all eyes and ears are focused on every word you are saying. It's the greatest feeling when you walk out of the room and know that you did your best, even if you didn't win. Every debate round is more exciting than the one before because you learn and do better next time." -Karina Smith

This is my first year in ACDC, and so far I'm really enjoying it. I think it's interesting learning new things, and even though it sounds weird, taking the tests can actually be fun. One of the best parts is getting to travel and compete in other towns. I've also helped out with fundraising by selling brainfreezes and snowcones for our trip to Anchorage. -Jesse Curran

Some students will do anything to get near candy. With the opportunity to join JA's Sugar High, Chris Giles jumps to the occasion. After discussion and company updates, Chris's favorite part of the meeting begins. He loves producing their baskets of candy. All he has to say about that is, "Junior Achievement is YUMMY!" He can't wait for that special day of each week when he will be reunited with his candy.

"Spanish Club is a lot of fun. Some of the things we participate in are we play neat Spanish games like Lo Tengo, watch interesting movies in Spanish, and have parties. At those parties or fiestas, we eat Spanish food. I don't know much Spanish, but that's all right since Ms. Patton and the rest of the students who do know Spanish help me and other people who aren't as knowledgeable in the language," says Sadie Stacy.

Expressing the valuable knowledge he has gained over the years, Scott Hildebrandt, a member of Taste Temptations, says, "In Junior Achievement you are taken through the steps on how to run a business. Demonstrated are how the board of directors run meetings. You also learn how to sell stock and make your own wages. JA is a lot of fun and you learn a lot, plus you can make new friends."

"I have learned a lot about business in Junior Achievement. It has given me information about how businesses work. Sugar High Inc., my company this year, is producing dishes of candy. Students learn responsibilities by having to sell their products so that they can raise the stock and receive a commission. The more you sell, the bigger your paycheck," shares Vice President of Human Resources Josie Kloxin.

"The Spanish Club gives me more time to work on other Spanish things such as those horrendous movies we make for Spanish quarter projects. It also allows me to increase my knowledge of the Spanish language and culture. Ah... Spanish is a life skill that I'm going to have to know to get ahead after high school," states Drinnan Thornton, a junior participant of Spanish Club.
Tearin' up the road and rippin' up the dirt are seniors Brian Thompson and Jason Pipal. Both Jason and Brian have been riding motorcycles since they were old enough to say 'Vroom, vroom!' And all these years later they still spend most of their time in the dirt, except now they move around a little bit faster. They share their love of motorized vehicles with their friends and would most likely be found spittin' dirt out at Whipple Creek. When you can't find them tearing up a piece of terrain, you'll probably find them out with friends conversing on the meaning of life or how to increase the horsepower of your 125cc without getting your insurance raised. Wherever you find them, it will probably be on a bike or looking underneath the hood of Brian's Camaro. So strap on your helmets and get ready to ride with the big boys!

Trying to intrude on the picture are sophomore Jimmy Parrott and senior Danny Anslinger. Senior Brian Elliott and junior Eli Stiwell were showing off those buff biceps before they were interrupted by their pals. Junior Jesse Austin and Anjalee Blackwell decide to join in on the fun and see what's going on. Jesse helps Eli out with the old 'American Flag in the ear' trick that always helps your biceps look bigger. All of these silly kids are practicing their smiles for photo day instead of going to class; what bad examples they are. Danny must obviously see a little yellow bird up on a pillar near the ceiling that is to whisper things to him. Unfortunately he can't hear over the roar of his crazy, and maybe even a little obnoxious, classmates. I'm sure it wasn't that important, not as important as getting a great school picture.

Standing in a pyramid of friendship, senior Dan Dunham jumps to the top, smashing all those below him. Being good friends are junior Leah Brown, seniors Trevor Mechem and Karen Youngblood, sophomore Carrie Atwood, seniors Matt Beimler and Dustin Shull, junior Tom Barrett, and senior Jamie King. On the bottom, holding the weight of it all, is freshman Norman Erickson. Carrie brushes back her hair, which smacks Matt in the face, who ducks from Tom's swinging Coke bottle, which almost smacks Dan in the face, all in the school that Jack built. Jamie is holding her bread and other assorted yummy lunch foods, waiting for the perfect time to be a good friend and share it with all of her terrific buddies. Leah seems to be the most excited of them all with a huge, beautiful smile on her face.

After a long summer of giving tours at the George Inlet Cannery, Senior Marie Updike and Sophomore Kirsten Mix jumped off a dock south of town, along with a few other co-workers. "No other employees had the guts to do it, so just Marie and I did it," Kirsten exclaimed. Fully clothed and aflame with exuberant behavior, the two floated down into the icy cold waters of the Tongass Narrows. What could have been on their minds as they took a quick plunge into the murky waters? Perhaps the explosive applause of onlookers, a payoff of cash, or maybe they were just doing it to get the smell of fish out of their uniforms. And if you are up for it, take the plunge yourself, if you have the guts. But not many have the ambition and wit as these two wild and crazy gals.
"Who was that girl in our math class?" 'What about that guy in English?'' With the school being as small as it is, returning students seem to notice new faces easily.

Approximately 63 new students entered Kayhi to venture through the 1996-97 school year.

What were their first impressions of Kayhi students? Sophomore Angela Wade, who is originally from Craig, had this to say, "They're really nice and I was glad to meet them." Another Craig sophomore, Cathryn Coats, seemed to be generally pleased with her new peers. When asked if Kayhi students were different from her old school, she replied with, "Yeah, they (Craig students) were really stuck on themselves and wanted to look alike."

I guess that means that Kayhi students are smokin' salmon.

There are plenty of new faces to meet with all the freshmen, who seem to be everywhere, and the many other new kids from all over the world. Olga Tanner, who is a sophomore this year, has been in Alaska for three years but is originally from the nearby country of Russia. Her opinion of Kayhi students is," Very, very interesting."

"Very, very interesting," was sophomore Olga Tanner's take on Kayhi students.

With the addition of the new-to-Ketchikan students and the bus loads of freshmen, it's been an interesting time trying to get through the halls.

The freshmen, still getting used to high school life, didn't have much to say about how it felt to be new. The only thing that could be pulled out of any freshman was from Alexis Pahang, saying only, "I don't know."

So, don't be bashful, go out there, find someone you don't know, including that girl in your math class, and give them a big Kayhi smile.

Mischief is one of the things that contributes to Kayhi's crazy scene. One can often see cars that have been saran wrapped, toilet papered, and even egged. As wacky as it may seem, many students have experienced and even participated in it.

Phil Jackson remembers his experience when his car was beautifully decorated.

"At first I was mad, then it was time for payback!"

Micah Henrick explains, "Last year I got a little smart with the seniors and they poured barbecue and mustard sauce on me... I became the human hotdog!" -Micah Henrick

While looking through the halls of Kayhi, school spirit is at its best. Running with boxer shorts on one's head and screaming before a big meet contributes to the funky things students can get away with.

One can often find creativity in craziness.

Abel Piercy commented on, "The time Luke Schwartz and I built a chair monument in the early hours of the morning, here in our lovely commons."

No matter how tough, shy, or outgoing, almost everyone seems to have a silly quirk to them.

Right: Jesse Cannon, a junior, decides it's time to get the show on the road. Whimpering from the ground, junior Robin Tatsuda hopes to rest just a little bit longer. Those lazy skateboarders.

Right: So what? Just kickin' back, juniors Robin Tatsuda, Jesse Cannon, Sara Allen, Jesse Avila, and sophomore Mike Whipple, take a breather. The Tongass dock is home to some of the craziest kids around these parts.

Right: Smile! Juniors Jesse Cannon and Nick Burns squint in the sunlight while sophomore Mike Whipple looks on, marveling at these ranting lunatics. We know a good time when we're having one, is the only response.
You've seen them walking in the hall, downtown, everywhere. Sporting their baggy pants, hip-hop style, and fancy get-ups, skateboarders, bicyclists, and rollerbladers alike are fighting for their right to have a good time. Faced with the possibility of losing their turf, each new decision by the Borough Assembly brings tension and anticipation to the dock and other local areas used by these crazy kids.

Officer Waldren, of the Ketchikan Police Department, responded to a call from the City Bus. "We had a report of some kids playing chicken with the bus. They're already talkin' about a ban. We don't want that to happen...You guys have to have an area to do that."

Left: Yeah, I'm hardcore. Luke Schwartz, a junior biker, knows he's king of this jungle. Nothing stops this tiger: after all, no guts, no glory! You can find this fearless dude rippin' up the streets 24-7.

Left: Look at him go! I sure hope he can stomp this! A group of skateboarders wait for their turn. Portable launch ramps such as these are often constructed for the use of rollerbladers and bikers, as well as that of the skateboarders.

Below: Uh oh. Junior Sara Allen can't believe she got busted again! "I was sure nobody saw me!" Running from the law is harder than it may appear, especially on a board with four wheels, two trucks, and black grippy stuff.

"My dad's a cop...He thinks kids should have fun." -Karl Bruening, sophomore

So have fun, I don't care, just don't ride into any buses."

Eric Auger, a sophomore, said the ban would, "just create more problems." Another sophomore, Jared Plumb, agreed, "We'll just do it even more."

There is, however, a proposal for a multi-purpose park to be composed of halfpipes and a funbox-pyramid.

"Outside of wondering whether the proposed restriction on sidewalk activity will go through or hoping for a new skating facility, it's certain that things are changing. Tom Coyne, borough assembly and city council member, was quoted as saying, "When we're taking so many things away from the youth, we have to give them back something in return. You can't just indiscriminately take things away...""

No matter what, let's just hope we can roll away from this one.

Much has been accomplished in the field of arts by Nathan Jackson. Last year, he won the National Endowment for the Arts and traveled to Washington D.C. to accept it. There he met Hilary Clinton, who presented him with 10,000 dollars for the work he had done. Last summer, he went to Germany with his son, Stephen Jackson, who graduated from Kayhi in 1994. Together the two of them finished carving a pole which was then put up in Germany. Nathan also did the art work in the Kayhi Auditorium. Along with the contributions which Nathan Jackson has made, Ketchikan has blossomed in many ways in the field of art. With a large range of Native Alaskan and modern art, Ketchikan has expanded its aesthetic boundaries, being named one of the top one hundred art towns in America.

Over the last ten years, tourism has become a major part of Ketchikan's industry and economy. With the closure of the Ketchikan Pulp Company, it is expected that tourism will become even more important to Ketchikan. In the summer of 1996, an estimated 420,000 visitors came off the cruise ships, and in the summer of 1997, 470,000 are expected. New shops have been erected, such as Dockside Trading Company, Alaskan Ivory Exchange, and Alaska's Wildlife Emporium. New cruise ships which docked in Ketchikan in the summer of 1996 were the Horizon, Sea Bourn Pride, Tropicale, and the Universe Explorer. Tourism contributes to a strong economy, which benefits Ketchikan and allows many people to experience Alaska.

"Life is a cycle, and trying to halt it at one point will cause nothing but pain..." Senior Mandy Davis wrote her first editorial in response to an article published in the September 16, 1996 issue of Newsweek. The article discussed the new possibilities involved in using testosterone and other hormone treatments to keep me youthful, sexy and strong." Mandy was immediately driven to write in soon after receiving the issue. She received ample recognition for her letter, and in without good reason!

Sitting quietly on the sidewalk, Moggie the Dog watches passing pedestrians and tourists. Moggie, who lived to be 13 and died on the 29th of November, 1996, was a town symbol and was often seen carrying the bank bag for Don's Business Supply. Last summer, in accordance with the leash law, Moggie had to be kept indoors. Few weeks before his death, he received a license which exempted him from the law. Moggie will always be lovingly remembered by the citizens of Ketchikan, and his memory will be carried on in his friend, Mugs.

Kayhi Current Events

Welcome to cyberspace! Last spring, Kayhi began surfing the Information Super Highway.

Kayhi seniors went for the best when they applied and got accepted to Harvard, Smith, Willamette, and Tulane.

On Valentine's Day, Kayhi students attended the Morp dance, which acted as a contrast to prom. The girls asked the guys and couples came to the totally informal dance to party the night away.

The first ever gay's drill team came to Kayhi, showing they could dance as well as the girls.

The recycling committee grew larger as more and more students pitched in to help Mother Nature by beautifying our planet.

The morning announcements became exciting and pepped up as the announcers added their own "fact of the day," which included cool facts like the lawbooks of Ketchikan stating that it was illegal for women to wear high heels downtown.

Kayhi students added more art to the school; it includes a canvas of a king salmon by Ray Troll, a large 33 by 8 foot tile mural featuring various sports, and a welcoming 3-D circle made by students under the observation of Mr. McFadden.

Sound Bytes and Quotes

"She is just a little girl who was never the roughest, toughest girl, always a little shy, always standing behind someone else." Olympic Coach Bela Karoli gloatins about Kerri Strug, who performed a winning vault after spraining her ankle.

"We now realize maybe, just maybe, this virus is not as invincible as we previously thought." Dr. David Ho expressing his thoughts on the advances which have been made concerning the AIDS virus.

"This is why you should take a look at me, these are my values, this is what I would do for America, whether it's safer streets, better schools or lower taxes. You know, a better man for a better America. That's sort of our slogan." '96 Presidential Candidate Bob Dole.

"The current welfare system undermines the basic values of work, trapping generation after generation in dependency, and hurting the very people it was designed to help." President Bill Clinton talking about his changing welfare.

"When you think of the Atlanta Olympics, you'll think of the bomb in Centennial Park...If I could find the guy who did this, I promise you I'd kick his butt." U.S. Silver Medalist Greco-Roman Wrestler Matt Ghaffari.
There are many opportunities, inside the school and in the community, to exercise. Jeremy Mutart says, "I play basketball for the city league and I sometimes play on outside courts and stuff. I also ran track last year and I'm going to again this year. I have personal fitness for gym." Staying fit is an important part of staying healthy. "I like to exercise so I don't become fat."

Exercise provides Nicole Beraldi a chance to travel. "I do power lifting because I'm going to enter The Power Lifting Contest. My goal is to beat three State Competition records, benching 100, squatting 195, and deadlifting 215." Exercise is a great time to bond with friends. "Last year, when I was a freshman, I was duct taped to a pole on the ferry by all the seniors on a track trip."

It's not always easy to eat the foods that maintain a healthy body and mind. Mark Shersten manages to stay on the right track. "I eat right, things like salads and high protein foods." Along with eating healthy foods, it is also essential to exercise. "I play a lot of sports that involve running, like baseball, basketball and soccer. I also weight train which keeps me in good physical condition."

To stay fit, some people work out at home. Amanda Machado says, "I work out on our Price Rider, and I try to lift weights when I watch T.V. I work out in my house whenever I have time. My mom teaches aerobics classes so she shows me stuff to do. I think it is good to stay fit, but it shouldn't come to the point where you are obsessed with exercise. People are going to die anyway."

Hats today are not only used to keep heads warm and toasty, they are also a fashion statement. From the standard baseball cap to the new height of the floppy hat, there are many shapes, colors, and patterns showing the attitude of the wearer.

"Hats rock! They let you become someone else. They are an extension of your personality," Terri Walker said.

"Hats allow people to see a part of your personality, such as what brand names you prefer to wear and what sport teams you like best." Whenever the urge to crawl into a hole arises, because it is a bad day, one can instead hide under a big cozy hood.

The hats people have are sometimes very meaningful to the owner. Although half the bill may have fallen off, the color has faded beyond recognition, and people complain of its odor, the prized possession is kept because of the fond memories or meaning.

"Hats rock! They let you become someone else. They are an extension of your personality."

-Terri Walker

Cara Wallace has a hat which she dares not throw away. "I have ski hats, yarn, and baseball caps. I got them at Nike Town, the Sesame Street Store, and one of my favorites is the one my mom made me. I never wear it though because it is really goofy looking."

Hats also have reasons, besides fashion, to be worn. They are the perfect way to look stylish but still cloak the most hideous hair day imaginable, screen eyes from harmful UV-rays, and possibly gain the few extra inches required to pass that dreaded height test to ride a favorite roller coaster or amusement park ride.

Whatever the occasion or mood, anyone can be sure to find a hat to fit their needs.

Left: For a change of pace, Monica Guzman tries on a sombrero. Although this hat is not much use when up against Ketchikan's rain, it is fun for spicing up an everyday outfit.

Below Right: The ants go marchin' 4x4... And senior Nicholas McJunkin does too! With all the backroads in Ketchikan, goin' four-byin' is quite the weekend sport!

Right: Whoa there! Aren't there easier ways to go about this? Junior Melanie Green is on her way to a gnarly weekend. You can catch more of her flippin' action at the basketball games.

Right: A freshman in the bush is as good as twenty in the halls. Who knows what is goin' through Leif Thompson's head! I've got the whole world in my hands...

Above: Skippin' out early to get a little ball handling in before his weekend game, freshman Tim Volpi will have the upper hand against the challenging Dribbler's League team.

Right: An apple a day keeps the doctor away... An Apple Computer that is! Junior Jason Thomas tends to get a little goofy as the weekend draws near. Three cheers for new technology!
The week is over, time for a fantabulous fun-filled adventure... Sophomore Spencer Hooker knows exactly what he wants his weekend to be like. "Some place warm- a weekend long beach party..." After working so hard, it is no wonder Spencer is in dreamland. "After a week of school, I'm just ready to take a break from it all." And what does he do on his 'break'? "We drive around a lot, go visit other people- see what's goin' on." Buckle up!

Thank Goodness It's Friday! After five long days of painstaking homework, grueling tests, and energy-stripping class discussions, the bell on Friday afternoon is welcomed in every student's life. Junior Erin Doom is no exception! "Finally it's over!" Like so many others, Erin looks forward to a peaceful weekend of rest and relaxation. "I hang-out at my house and eat ice cream and oranges." What a healthy pasttime! Ever had orange sherbert Erin?

Every student has their weekend ambitions. Some catch up on sleep, some soak in the tub, and others might even mud wrestle. Junior Laura Rosendin has her own idea of what to do... "I try to stay as far away from the school as possible. It's hard to find stuff to do in the winter, but you can have fun if you keep your eyes open." It's true, K-town isn't stock full of clubs or sports events, but with creative minds like Laura's, kids will always be on the roll!

Friends have always been a staple for true weekend fun. From slumber parties to pizza, soda, and a movie, a pal and his chums are inseparable. And like most kids, junior Tommy Bergeron and his friends have their own ideas of what's hot and what's not. Tommy often spends his time on the weekend... "at my friends' houses playing video games. WarCraft is my favorite." From Star Wars to Mario Kart, T.V. is a must for that perfect weekend.

Above: A step above the rest, sophomore Michelle Ethier takes on an aerial perspective. "I'm afraid of heights you guys!" Oh well, too late now! So, what do you see...

A night to remember, this year's Winterball was a complete success. The court consisted of seniors queen Bernadette Johnson and king Andy Bernston, Emily Moore and Caspian Brand, Kim Smith and Jon Stack, Crystal Skidmore and Ben Vlaun, Jennifer Dossman and Allan Cline, Remaline Domingo and Jason Bennie. Junior prince was Erik Christensen, and the princess was Lindsay Barry. Sophomore prince was Matt Wolf and his princess was Stephanie Brown. Freshman prince and princess were Samantha Bass and Alexis Pahang.

The difference between winterball and homecoming really was minimal. Students still danced the night away in their formal attire. Sophomore Liandra Danner stood on her own when she said that the best part was the cookies. Senior Justin Ingman was very passionate about the night, exclaiming, "It was the best and worst day of my life. I boogied down; I busted a move." -Justin Ingman more princess Stephanie Brown said, "The best part of a semi-formal dance is getting dressed up and boogying all night long." There were a lot of different beliefs about the best part of the dance, but sophomore Liandra Danner stood on her own when she said that the best part was the cookies. Senior Justin Ingman was very passionate about the night, exclaiming, "It was the best and worst day of my life. I boogied down; I busted a move."

Getting ready after the basketball games was a challenge for some. Freshman Kristen Carlile explained, "I cheered right before the game and it was kinda hard because I had to run home and shower real quick. It was the fastest I've ever gotten ready." Junior David Herby's night, however, was more relaxed, "We had dinner at my house, then we went to the dance afterwards; a bunch of us got together and played all night..."

All in all, everyone who attended this year's Winterball/Homecoming had a fantastic time, especially king Andy Bernston who believes, "It was destiny."

Right: Showing off their Halloween costumes are seniors Lanetta Munson and Elizabeth Rado and juniors Leah Brown and Kevin Fadley.

So many people do so many different things on Halloween night. Some go to costume parties, and others like to go to the armory dance. Sophomore Kristen Carlile says, "My Halloween tradition is that every year my friends and I go trick or treating and then go to one of our houses to scare the kids that come to the door. Most years we have a Halloween party too." Everyone has their own Halloween traditions. From dressing up to handing out candy at the door, everyone thinks of something fun and crazy to do.

To make Halloween a little more fun and crazy, junior T.C. Gubatayao says, "I like to dress up all in black. To make things more complete I also wear a ski mask and hide in a bush in front of my house. Since it was so dark, I was completely hidden. As the little unsuspecting kids found their way to our door, I would lunge from the bush straight at them. Most of the kids were too terrified to come to the door." These poor little kids aren't going to want to go trick or treating anymore.

Even though you're not a kid anymore, that doesn't mean that high school students or even teachers still can't have fun and dress up. Every year Mrs. Keizer has a tradition of making handmade costumes for all her family, including herself, to wear. She enjoys the challenge of creating what the kids think up. She also likes the freedom to be a total dork for one day! Halloween is the one time of the year that everyone can go all out and be as silly looking as they want and not worry about what other people think.

A lot of kids go out and try to have a good time on Halloween night. Halloween caused some problems this year because it happened to fall on a school day. "Halloween isn't anything that's special to me," according to junior Jaylyn Thomas. She just goes out and tries to have fun, and if she's lucky, maybe she can scruff up some candy, too. Not all kids are perfect angels on this night. Stealing pumpkins and swiping little kids candy seems to always give these bored teenagers something to do on Halloween night.

Guys vs. Girls

They say guys are from Mars and girls are from Venus, but we both have to share this little planet together. Though males and females have been here for thousands of years, they still know very little about each other. The olden days of guys courting a girl are over, and a new age of liberated dating has taken over.

The more time you spend with the opposite sex, the more you'll know. The top question guys have about girls is, "Why do they go to the bathroom together?"

Jennifer Ireland pondered the questions that most girls have about guys, "Why do guys always wear hats?" and "Why do guys do stupid things to get a girl’s attention?"

Junior Terresa Sobala spilled her guts by saying, "I like the way guys smell, and accents are cool."

When it came down to who they thought had more brains, 83% of the people surveyed thought that girls were smarter than guys. Josh Rose, a sophomore, explained this by saying, "Nature intended it to be that way." It seems that nature gave girls the brains and guys the brawn, but that isn’t always true, there are a few intelligent guys out there.

What does sophomore Paul Claasen like best about girls? "I like their smiles." What about Terresa Sobala’s favorite about guys? "I like the way guys smell, and accents are a plus." The majority of females agree.

Guys and girls both have their ups and downs, but everyone has to learn to deal with them and get along to be able to accomplish anything by working together. It isn’t just a man’s world anymore; it’s a world for both sexes to live together in. To be able to work out the problems that have been passed on from past generations, the sexes have to take a step together for a better and brighter future and to prepare the world for the take over by Generation X.

Right: Right off the annual calendar, this girl has nothing to hide! Senior Robin Morrison struts her stuff. It's nice to know that vehicle affection is still alive in today's youth.

Right: Thumbin' for a ride, juniors Lyndsey Stokes and Jessica Boyer don't need their own car to get from here to there. And with legs like that, they'll never have to walk again!

Right: Ready to go, seniors Jody Tavares and Dajani Henderson are outie 5000! These gorgeous damsels have places to go, people to see, and things to do!
A vehicle often gives its owner an unmistakable sense of pride. Brian Pyles, a junior, is the proud owner of a 1989, shiny white Chevy pick-up. But tagging behind confidence is often a hint of worry, and Brian is no exception. In Brian’s glovebox he keeps a flashlight..."So if it gets dark and my truck breaks down, which it never will," he adds quickly, "I’ve got a flashlight to see where I’m goin’." Even the strongest pride can’t hide fear.

Getting a license is one of the many joys of being in high school. Along with the driving privilege comes a world of new experiences. But for junior Debi Day, taking the big step was more than just an experience. "I went into the car dealership and they asked me what I wanted. In the extents of my car knowledge I said I wanted something small, white, rounded, and automatic." Debi now drives a white, 1997 Chevy Cavalier.

Driving can be a social highlight. Your car can really represent who you are. Senior Brian Elliott says that his red 1991 Toyota 4 x 4 is a "sporty truck for a sporty guy." Even with these highlights can come a few mishaps. Brian has had his own share of mishaps; while he was driving in his truck he saw some friends and stuck out his head; meanwhile, a flock of seagulls flew over head, leaving him with a white sploosh on his head.

An accident can mean more than the loss of your car. As well as destroying a car, it can also destroy a driving record and a parent’s trust. Junior Phil Jackson explains, "I got in a wreck on the bypass. Pat Currall stopped on the bypass and I rear-ended him. I got my car fixed about a month later. The steering wheel was bent about 90 degrees!" Phil was able to beat the odds and get his car fixed. But it was a very important lesson.

Moving from childhood to the teens, there are a lot of changes to undergo that fill our lives with stress. Being young with new thoughts and feelings that burden us everyday, stress becomes our shadow, following us wherever we go.

School is probably the most stressful time for most teenagers because with a lot of school, there is a lot of homework.

"Too much homework," exclaimed sophomore Jeremy Cloudy.

Even when we began our teenage years, it was hard to walk through Schoenbar looking at a bunch of new faces and trying to fit in right away.

"My whole seventh grade year was very stressful," sighs junior Scot Mello.

Lots of the things that we conceived to be stress when we were younger are now thoughts we look back on and giggle at.

This is mostly due to the fact that we are making more educated and mature decisions about our stress.

But, of course, there are still those problems that take more to deal with.

"The most stressful time for me is when my parents got a divorce," recalled freshman Barbara Johnson.

The important thing to remember is that any stress, no matter how difficult, will usually get better with time and patience. Everybody deals with their stress in different ways, but sometimes the best way is to stay away from the stressful situation, relax and do something enjoyable.

"When I'm stressed, I like to watch television or play on the computer," smiles senior Brian Frasier.

When ever you feel as if you are stressing out, relax, stop what you're doing, take a couple of deep breaths and think happy thoughts.

Let it snow, let it snow, let it snow! It's winter and students have set their books aside to head towards the fun. "Winter sports that I like are snowboarding and mountain biking. Of course, the things you get the most satisfaction from is stuffing snow down a sophomore's back," describes freshman Donald Alderman.

Playing in the snow is definitely a "must" during the winter season.

Winter can be dangerous whether it involves sledding or just playing in the snow. "I've never really hurt myself sledding (wow!) Usually I injure myself by just trying to walk somewhere. I'll just step right on the ice and the next thing I know I'll be on my butt staring up at the sky trying to decide whether to cry or laugh," explains freshman Renee Woodruff as she thinks of her past experiences.

The winter season includes many different weather types. "When it rains, it is no fun to go outside, so I sit inside and practically do nothing all winter. The winter season consists of no snow. Just rain, rain, and MORE rain!" says junior Rhiann Golder reminding everyone that Ketchikan is a rain forest!

Rain, rain, go away, come again some other day... and give us some snow!

"Winter can be somewhat scary here; you always have to look left and right when you go outside of the school, being careful not to get beamed with a snowball, then being careful to slip when you're running away from the person throwing the snowballs!" exclaims sophomore Crystal Williamson. Getting caught in the midst of a snowball fight is definitely not uncommon within these turfs.

Right: Just horsing around is junior Blanche Dilleshaw. Weekends provide time for her to enjoy her horses. She has become an expert at grooming and caring for them.
To the uncreative person, the weekends in Ketchikan, Alaska can be very long and boring. However, many people find countless ways to make their weekend exciting. Where does one go late on a Friday night? "Partying, but not what you think!" replied Sam Elliott with apprehension. Since Sam is a FRESHMAN, he's not as rowdy as some of the upper classmen.

"I go out with my friends and go to parties," said Samantha Bass while commenting on her after-hours activities. Usually she is home by eleven o'clock on the weekends. But lately she's been a little incapacitated as far as late night antics are concerned. "I'm grounded, so not much," she replied reluctantly when we inquired about what she planned to do this weekend.

Everyone has a favorite place to hang out. Some like the mall parking lot, some like to go to their friend's house, and others just like to cruise around. Molly Berntson has many places she likes to hang out, but her favorite is unquestionably, "Hewitt's house!" Spending time with the vice-principal and his family is always a good way to stay out of trouble.

Often times a lively night life requires a little quick thinking, ingenuity, and, every once in a while, a little white lie. Sophomore Barbie Hull is a master at this trade, using her vast arsenal of after-hour excuses. "An elephant gave birth in the car and we had a terrible mess to clean up," is one of Barbie's favorites. Can you imagine the look of horror on her poor mom's face!

Above: On right, sophomore Trent Matthews is being led into his first fight by Ken Ketah. Many students spend their weekends learning valuable job skills that may eventually lead to a future career.

Left: Taking a look at a beautifully decorated Christmas Tree, Loni McGarrigan decides whether she should go to a Christmas party with friends or go home and get some sleep. After a hard week of school, it can be a hard decision, although parties usually prevail.

MILKY-WAY
en from across the narrows, downtown Ketchikan sits nestled below the sloping hill of Deer Mountain. A large collection of fluffy snow rests on the mountain, proving that winter is slowly creeping up. The sun shines on the Lutheran church, Talbots, and the countless other buildings, all of which lay along the stretch of road which is Tongass. The cluster of small houses gives an image of a very majestic and peaceful town, one where community spirit is strong and people are always ready and willing to help their neighbor. This is the view which often greets the tourists who come to visit our statuesque town. Postcards often display pictures like this, photos of towns where there is a powerful mixture of gentle nature and a growing city. These are some of the qualities of our wonderful home, Ketchikan.

Sparkling and reflecting beneath the fluffy, pale clouds which hang in the grey sky, the tranquil ocean lies flat and calm. On this placid day at Bar Harbor, waves and white caps are not to be found. Instead, the many boats sit peacefully on the water, bobbing lightly with the undulating motions of the ocean. They are patiently waiting to be taken out by excited owners, since serene days are difficult to find once Ketchikan's fall season begins. The boats have been lovingly painted colors of white, brown, grey, but never green. The old adage states that if a boat is painted green, it will spend all its days longing for the land. Above the boats, the sun is breaking through the clouds and casting a light shadow on the water below. The parents of many Kayhi students own boats in this harbor and are always ready to take them out for a short trip.

One of Ketchikan's most well known totems is the Bald Eagle, carved by Nathan Jackson, which resides above the City Dock. It is not uncommon to see tourists crouching under the "back side" of the bird, happily posing for pictures to send back home. One can also see them standing in the street gawking in amazement while traffic swerves by. This bird is not only a tourist attraction. Locals also make use of one of the few patches of luxurious green grass in Ketchikan, enjoying picnics and socializing. Perching high above the grassy knoll, the eagle is ready for flight and is colorfully decorated. Because of this creative stance, the high school students of Kayhi, and other visiting schools, have christened the carving "The Mooning Eagle." No matter how it is referred to, everyone agrees that the totem itself is a beautiful representation of our local culture.

Getting back to old traditions, Ketchikan's City Sign was remodeled to match the original nifty fifty's version this past summer. Like the fifties motif, it is decorated with neon lettering and pictures. These designs illustrate the town's most common characteristics and even points out one of the accomplishments, our ability to catch the fish. Unfortunately, it only begins to tell tourists about the record holding titles. It does not mention that Ketchikan is ranked as one of the top 100 most artistic places to visit in the United States, nor does it mention that Revillagigedo, home of Ketchikan, is the 7th largest island in the world. We are often referred to as not even being on the map, yet each year over 400,000 tourists come and experience Ketchikan's unique traditions, both old and new, along with its continually growing accomplishments.

Ketchikan Lodging

Westmark Cape Fox Lodge Stands High In Ketchikan.

Ketchikan. It's truly a magical place filled with wonder and adventure. First port of call into Alaska along the Inside Passage, Ketchikan offers visitors and residents a diverse number of activities and attractions.

The waterfront community is home to the largest Native population in the state and examples of these vibrant cultures can be found throughout the area. You will also discover some of the world's finest fishing, spectacular scenic vistas, majestic glaciers, a rich history, and abundant wildlife within close proximity to Ketchikan.

Westmark, the hotel's chefs have mastered the art of selecting the perfect spices and accompaniments to enhance the delicate flavor of Alaska's marine wonders. Due to its location, guests at the Heen Kahidi Restaurant also have the added benefit of a spectacular view of the surrounding area as they dine.

When the conversation turns to fine dining in Ketchikan you can be certain that the Heen Kahidi Restaurant is at the top of the list. Open for breakfast, lunch and dinner every day of the week, the restaurant consistently receives rave reviews for its fresh seafood entrees. The new rooms at the Westmark Cape Fox Lodge are spacious, comfortable, and offer great views of the surrounding landscape.

The company my dad works for helps me play softball.

My name is Jennifer Azure. I play on a softball team in Ketchikan. I love it. I could play all the time. My dad works with the Ketchikan Pulp Company (KPC). I don’t know much about KPC, but I think they must be real sports fans.

There are many people of all ages, from tee-ball leaguers to grown-ups, who play in our local softball and baseball leagues. Every year, KPC helps make sure we have everything we need to play. They help provide us with new bats and balls and keep the fields in good shape.

KPC is helping us have fun and learn about team-spirit. I don’t think about it much when I’m at the plate or out in the field, but KPC must really care about our community. Dad says KPC is working for Ketchikan. That’s good because it means I can keep playing.

The 1997 Williwaw Staff would like to thank all of its many contributors. Their help and cooperation with this year’s book was deeply appreciated. The following deserve a special thanks:

Hall Anderson for donating so many of his wonderful pictures to Williwaw this year.

The staff at Ketchikan High School for allowing time out of their classes and lives to have student’s pictures taken.

Brooke Meacham and Sara Allen for designing such a wonderful cover for the yearbook this year and for all the effort put into it.

All parents of Williwaw staff members for their patience with the late deadlines and bustling weekend get togethers.

The office staff at Kayhi for their patience with our running in and out.

Connie for keeping the Williwaw staff always in the green.

Debby for her continual naming of mystery faces and knowledge of the students.

Loreli for making list after list of names of the ever-changing student body.

Schallers for their help with this year’s pictures and their abundant knowledge of photography. To all the people who supported the 1997 yearbook. And, of course, all the students who attend Kayhi for their patience and cooperation with the funny and interesting poses we subjected them to.

See ya next year everybody! Sophomore Elizabeth Kloxin waves a fond farewell to Kayhi until fall. She's happy to be heading off for summer vacation. Let's hope her junior year is as kicking as her sophomore.

Hold that pose! Wanna be supermodel, sophomore Annie Fisher, shows off her fabulous brand new hat. With the confidence of Kayhi behind her, Annie knows she'll be ready for stardom.

As we begin to venture our own ways, we are reminded of the astronomically fun times at Kayhi. With the tiny basketball games, rainy cross country meets, and swim competitions passing into the distant skies, we remember the thrill of the victories that were won. The friendships we kindled at school activities and late night study sessions helped propel us through some of the unkind hardships present as our community prepared to lose a major contributor to our economy and school—the Pulp Mill. Even though there was much uncertainty in our community, students at Kayhi continued to pitch in a helping hand by collecting toys and canned foods for the needy. As we look back, we feel satisfied seeing the infamous Mr. Crockett lose his position as the top donator of canned goods after eleven years of holding the title. Even with a large group of students participating in community service, school continued as usual. Seniors had to face the dreaded, most feared paper in the solar system, The Senior Thesis Paper, which was assigned for the bizzilionth time. While seniors endured their trials and tribulations all students experienced a second year of semester final exams much to their dismay. Even with all of this hard work Kayhi students always found time to participate in activities like Homecoming, Southeast Basketball, and senior skip day, and many students filled their time with spectacular concerts and dramatic theater productions. As our busy year comes to a close we are reminded that the Twenty-first Century is at hand. Our awareness of our universe has increased as we watched the presidential debates and eventually witnessed Bill Clinton take victory over Bob Dole. On the brink of a new Century, Kayhi is blasting into a world of opportunities, and providing us with the tools we will need to succeed. Armed with friendships and memories, we are ready to face our future, prepared to boldly go where no person has ever gone before, OUT OF THIS WORLD.

A healthy Kayhi butt-line proudly ends another shining year of brilliant conquests. Remembering the good times and the bad, this line of perfection speaks "goodbye" to this year's Kayhi pride.
You have reached the stars. You have reached the stars. You have reached the stars.

Colophon: The 1997 Williwaw had a press run of 550 copies, and 208 pages were printed in a 9 X 12 trim size, 80 lbs. The book contains 32 color pages and 8 pages of spot color. All printing and binding was done by Jostens Publishing Company. Gil Quezada was the plant consultant and Roy Sisler was the local representative.

Cover design concept was done by Brooke Meacham and Sara Allen and finalized and printed by Jostens Art Consultants. Our final cover was a glossy finish with a maroon and white swirl with gold foil letters and emblem. All deadlines were met on time, and the book was submitted on the third of March and distributed in early May. The book was sold for $35.00 for the first week with name in foil for free and then increased to $40.00 for the remainder of the year. The summer supplement was sold for $5.00 consistently.

The yearbook advisor was Mrs. O’Brien for the fourth year in a row. The Editor-in-Chief was Alyx Lesko for the second year. The two Associate Editors were Larissa Hebel and Debi Day, and the Copy Editor was Jesse Curran. The Photography Editors were Whitney Tinney and Kirsten Mix. The Williwaw yearbook staff consisted of 26 students. All copy, photography, theme concept and designs were done by students. The principal was Mr. Kennedy and the Vice-Principal was Mr. Hewitt.

We would like to give special thanks to everybody who helped make this yearbook possible. The yearbook staff would also like to thank Mrs. O’Brien for her leadership and patience she displayed while dealing with our insanity.
